900 Homes Smashed In 5 Midwest States; 20 Victims Listed at Cape Girardeau, Mo.

(Pictures on Page 3)

By The Associated Press

Forty-four persons died Saturday and Sunday in tornadoes and windstorms which roared through five Midwestern States.

At least 219 persons were injured and upward of 900 homes were smashed as the twisters bore down on sections of Missouri, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa and Kentucky Saturday night.

The dead included: 20 at Cape Girardeau, Mo.; 8 at Shelburn, Ind.; 5 at Wood River, Ill.; 4 at Palestine, Ill.; 2 at Terre Haute, Ind.; one at Clay City, Ind.; and one each at Clarkesville, Bessville and Cabool, Mo.

Sunday a young mother was killed in Somerset, Ky., where a severe storm caused property damage estimated at $750,000.

Zelienople, Pa., felt the force of a twister Sunday which tore down trees, lifted roofs and cut off electricity. No one was injured.

Week of Violent Weather

The death toll followed a week of violent weather, primarily in the South Plains States. Tornadoes there killed five persons, and flood waters claimed three more lives.

Saturday night's worst twisters ground through Cape Girardeau, Mo., Wood River, Ill., and Shelburn, Ind.

Hardest hit was Cape Girardeau, a community of 20,000 on the west bank of the Mississippi River, 90 miles south and east of St. Louis. Here, the Red Cross reported, 21 persons were dead, 112 injured, and hundreds homeless.

The twister cut a swath through a residential area of industrial workers along the river bank, destroying 202 homes and damaging 231. Nineteen business places and one church were demolished.

One hundred miles to the north, on the Mississipi's Illinois bank near Alton, the heavily industrial community of Wood River, population about 9000, took a devastating blow. Six dead and 55 injured were counted after 325 homes were splintered. A heavy downpour accompanied the destruction, which caught many persons at dinner.

Death in Indiana

Shelburn, an Indiana community of 1000, 18 miles south of Terre Haute, was hit hard. Here 8 died and 47 were injured. The Red Cross reported 65 homes demolished and 60 damaged severely.

The twisters and converging winds rampaged over other areas of eastern Missouri, southeastern Iowa, southern Illinois, southwestern Indiana and northwestern Kentucky.

A wind swirl that passed north of Palestine, Ill., smashed a highway lunch stand, killing four occupants. A tornado swept through Deming Park, 4 miles east of

2 D. C. Men Drowned In Bay

Two Southeast Washington men were drowned while boating at Cloverlea Beach, Mayo, Md., about 6 p. m. yesterday.

The victims were identified by Anne Arundel County police as William Martin, 22, of 703 12th st. se., and Edward Soper, 23, of 728 12th st. se.

State Trooper James Moreland said Soper, Martin and Martin's wife, Thelma, were in a rowboat with an outboard motor about 200 yards offshore when the motor dropped off the stern.

Soper jumped into the water to recover the motor. When Martin realized Soper could not swim he jumped in to help him. Martin could not swim either. it was re-

200,000 Reds Thrown Into Pootung Battle

Seek to Overwhelm Defenses Across River From Shanghai

Shanghai, May 22 (U.P.).—Chinese Communists threw an estimated 200,000 soldiers into the battle for Pootung today, hoping to overwhelm by sheer weight of numbers the stout government defenses across the Whangpoo River from Shanghai.

The Communists, in a week of heavy fighting, have not penetrated the defenses in strong enough force to threaten seriously the heart of Shanghai.

Pootung was comparatively quiet during the night and a garrison communique today said the Communists had brought in four more armies in an effort to crack Nationalist defenses at the summer resort of Kaochiao, on the Yangtze 12 miles north of Shanghai.

The government claimed an important victory in the Kaochiao area and said the Communists suffered 12,500 casualties in the fighting—the largest number mentioned in recent communiques. The announcement said 1500 Communists were captured with 150 machine guns and other equipment.

The announcement said the government recaptured many points lost in the first phase of the Pootung fighting and that the main body of the Communists was decimated.

One Chinese civil airline, CNAC, resumed service at Lunghwa Airport on the southeast fringe of Shanghai and planned 10 flights today to Canton, Formosa, Hongkong and Chungking.

Hundreds of thousands of people continued a confused migration from one side of the city to the other, hoping to find a safe place in event the fighting worsens.

Executions of six black market silver dollar dealers were carried out in three of the busiest parts of town.

Inflation continued to spiral upward. Newspaper prices shot up to two million Chinese dollars today—about four cents in United States currency. A cup of coffee cost four million.

1000 Injured, 1 Killed in Berlin Riots

Howley Calls Talks Of Western Allies To Deal With Railroad Clashes

(From Press Dispatches)

Berlin, (Monday) May 23.—New rioting broke out today in Berlin's railway strike and the American military commander called a meeting with the British and French to "deal with the intolerable situation."

At least one person has been killed and 1000 injured since the fighting began Saturday.

Strike headquarters announced also that eight men have disappeared and expressed fears they have been killed or are in Russian hands.

Shooting broke out at 3 a. m. in the rail yards near the Charlottenburg station. British-sector police said 250 Communist strikebreakers stormed a signal tower and transformer plant occupied by anti-Communist strikers and drove them out.

200 Guards Stoned

Just after midnight a crowd of 1000 strikers and sympathizers stoned about 200 guards of the Soviet-controlled railway system who had barricaded themselves in the Zoo station, about a mile from the Charlottenburg station. Both stations are in the British sector.

Brig. Gen. Frank Howley, the American commandant, asked his colleagues to meet at 10 a. m. today to consider a plea that the Western Allies restore order. The West Berlin City Council has asked the Western occupation authorities to order the Russians to cease their policing of the railways in west Berlin, a right they have under a 1945 four-power agreement.

"Requires Our Attention"

"This intolerable situation requires our attention," General Howley advised his colleagues. This is no longer just a matter between the Soviet-controlled Reichbahn (railroad) management and the workers. The management has used strikebreakers and armed police and threatened to discharge permanently all strikers."

Early yesterday police had fired on anti-Communist workers and injured four seriously.

During the afternoon and last night the violence subsided and it appeared that the peak of the rioting, beatings and shootings had been passed.

Interzonal rail traffic through the city appeared normal although the elevated railway traffic remained tangled.

The strike, growing out of the city's dual currency system, still was on. Non-Communist trade unions of Western Berlin threatened a general strike if there is no settlement soon.

The Soviet news agency ADN said 28 railway police from the eastern sector had been injured in attacks by strikers. Six were reported in a serious condition. Four strikers received serious gunshot wounds Sunday.

Strike leaders made these demands on the Russian-appointed railway management:

1. All dismissed workmen must be taken back.
2. Russian zone police who are

At Paris Meeting

Powers Told Not to Dictate To Russia

Moscow, May 22 (AP). — Pravda served notice today that it will be useless for the Western Powers to try to dictate to Russia at the Big Four meetings on Germany which start Monday in Paris.

Yuri Zhukov, Paris correspondent for the Communist Party organ, wrote that it is quite probable Britain, France and the United States would try to dictate some of their "conditions" to the Soviet Union, but added:

"More than once already it has been proven in practice that such methods are useless in relation to the Soviet Union."

He claimed the rightist press in Paris had been hopeful of agreement at first but that the attitude now has changed to pessimism. He referred to this as a "campaign" of the French press and said it was accompanied by "hurried steps toward completion of the partition of Germany"—acceleration of the creation of a provisional government for western Germany and approval of the Bonn constitution.

Zhukov claimed there is deep dissatisfaction in French circles with American policy and said the British also had become concerned because three-power meetings in the past few days have been far from "idyllic."

Big Four May Seek Way for Cold War End

Explorations at Paris Might Include Greece, Austria, China, Atom

By Wes Gallagher

Paris, May 22 (AP).—Big Four Foreign Ministers who meet here Monday to seek a German settlement may seize a favorable opportunity to explore a broader armistice in the cold war, diplomats said today.

Those explorations might deal with Greece, Austria, China and the atomic question. At best, however, they would be only on an informal basis.

The Foreign Ministers of the United States, Britain and France completed their preconference strategy meetings today.

In an hour and a half they gave final approval to a series of recommendations for a united Western front in the negotiations with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky on Germany. Germany is the only subject on the formal agenda.

The nature of the joint policy and strategy will not unfold until after the conference opens in the pink marble palace of the Duchess de Talleyrand at 4 p. m. (1 a. m. EDT) Monday.

However, authoritative sources indicated it will include these basic points:

1. A firm stand in support of the west German state.
2. Opposition to any Russian proposal for withdrawal of occupation troops.
3. Attempt to secure an iron-clad agreement with Russia on Berlin.
4. Demand that eastern Germany hold a free democratic election under four-power control before east German representatives are recognized as bargaining agents—an implied rejection of the Communist "People's Congress" as the legitimate government of the Soviet zone.
5. Demand that postwar changes in Germany's eastern frontiers—in favor of Poland—be considered provisional until confirmed by a peace conference.
6. Determination not to allow the conference to be used as a Soviet propaganda sounding board.

Resignation Of Lilienthal Demanded

Hickenlooper Sees Mismanagement; AEC Chief Cites U. S. 'Atom Preeminence'

By The Associated Press

Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) demanded yesterday that David E. Lilienthal resign as chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission for "incredible mismanagement."

Lilienthal promptly replied that the Nation's atomic "preeminence" is the answer to the Senator's "vague and ungenerous wholesale indictment."

Hickenlooper in a statement, said "our atomic program is suffering from equivocation, misplaced emphasis and waste" since Lilienthal took over two and a half years ago.

Lilienthal said that in sharp contrast to the situation when the civilian commission took over, production of atomic weapons is secure, raw materials supplies have increased and morale has been restored.

He made no direct reference to Hickenlooper's demand that he resign. Nor did he mention the Senator's charge that he had "sneered" at Congress' concern over the disappearance of a quantity of Uranium-235.

The Senator took issue with the commission as to the significance of that disappearance. The commission said no theft or loss was involved and that the quantity would not be helpful to an enemy.

"Vast Quantity" Gone

Hickenloper said the amount was "a vast quantity" so far as scientists are concerned.

And he added that Lilienthal was wrong when he said earlier there was no suspicion of theft or espionage.

"This is completely untrue," Hickenlooper said. He added that the FBI was called into the case when "the trail was completely cold" and seven weeks old. That was done, he said, because there was a suspicion of theft or espionage.

Lilienthal, in a statement released by the commission several hours later, said that when his agency took over from military authorities, "the atomic weapons position of this country was nothing less than tragic."

He said that as of that time (1) continued production of weapons was threatened, (2) morale of scientists was low, (3) no inventory of atomic materials or documents existed, and (4) the supply of raw materials was "tenuous."

Points To Weapons

"Today the project requires continual improvement, of course," he continued, "but the United States of America now has a substantial stockpile of atomic weapons including those of new design.

"Production of atomic materials has been made secure and very greatly increased.

"The raw materials supply situation has been vastly improved," Lilienthal went on. "The morale of scientific talent has been restored. The development of peacetime applications has made a favorable beginning."

Hickenlooper is the ranking Republican member of the Senate-House Committee on Atomic Energy, and was its chairman during the last GOP-controlled Congress.

Lilienthal said this committee has been kept fully informed in secret and top secret reports of United States progress in the field, and that its members therefore know "of this Nation's preeminence in the world today."

He noted that the committee has not been informed—at its own request—of the number of A-bombs on hand. That information is supplied only to President Truman

Forrestal Is Killed In 13-Floor Plunge From Hospital Tower

First Secretary Of Defense Found With His Bathrobe Cord Around Neck

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

James Forrestal, former Secretary of Defense, plunged 13 floors to his death at about 1:50 a. m. yesterday.

Forrestal, who was 57, plummeted from a sixteenth-floor window to a third-floor ledge at Bethesda Naval Hospital, where he had been under psychiatric care.

Dr. F. J. Broschart, Montgomery County medical examiner, certified the death as suicide.

President Truman, who said he was "inexpressibly shocked and grieved," ordered a period of national mourning until after the funeral.

Foiled Special Watch

During a five-minute period between visits to his room of a special watch, Forrestal walked across a corridor from his room to a diet kitchen, pushed open the single screen equipped with two hook-type latches and fell to his death.

A cord from his bathrobe, which he was wearing over his pajamas, was knotted tightly around his neck when he was found, and heavy scuff marks showed on the concrete facing of the hospital outside and below the window.

The marks may have been made in the course of the fall, or, if he did attempt to hang himself, could have been made while he was hanging outside the window, hospital officials said.

Whether he had attempted to tie the cord to a radiator under the window to hang himself may never be determined, hospital officials said. An autopsy has been ordered.

Copied Verse On Death

From a book of verse found lying open on a radiator beside his bed, he had copied several verses of Sophocles' "Chorus from Ajax." In firm and legible handwriting, these lines stood out:

"When Reason's day sets rayless—joyless—quenched in cold decay, better to die, and sleep the never-waking sleep than linger on, and dare to live, when the soul's life is gone."

Forrestal's suicide came less than two months after he had been admitted to the hospital on April 2 for rest and treatment of "operational fatigue."

Rear Admiral M. D. Willcutts, commandant of the Naval Medical Center which includes the hospital, ordered a naval board of inquiry. He said he wants a psychiatrist other than Forrestal's own physician, Capt. George N. Raines, to sit in on the investigation.

Only three weeks ago, Forrestal's psychiatrist had believed him sufficiently improved so that special restrictions on his activities

Unification Task Blamed

Friends Link Forrestal Death To Worries and Overwork

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Friends of James Forrestal are convinced the Nation's first Secretary of Defense broke down attempting the impossible.

They believe he worked and worried himself into nervous exhaustion trying to unify the armed forces and make America strong under handicaps that were all but insurmountable.

The fact that many obstacles were due to his own rigid standards and methods of doing things had little to do with it. That's the way he was, they say, and that's the way he had to operate.

History the Judge

History will decide whether his pioneer regime as Secretary of Defense was a success or failure. It is a matter of dispute today. Apparently, however, he felt he had failed.

Many Forrestal intimates, however, feel he was butting his head against a stone wall. They put it this way:

The country, paying little heed to details of the armed forces unification law approved two years ago, expected their first over-all defense boss to weld the Army, Navy and Air Force into a well-paced team.

Forrestal tried to do the job by what he called "evolution rather than revolution," by persuasion and cooperation rather than knocking heads together. The unification act was not a merger of the services, as popularly supposed, but a compromise measure leaving them considerable autonomy.

The first Defense Secretary, moreover, was in a peculiar position in administering the law—a far different position than that of his successor. As Secretary of the Navy, Forrestal had fought a merger of the forces and on being converted to "unification," had led a somewhat reluctant Navy into the "marriage."

Later, therefore, when he found that Navy-minded admirals and air-minded generals could see

News of Death Of Forrestal Shocks Nation

By James E. Hague
Post Reporter

The news of the suicide of James Forrestal yesterday brought spontaneous statements of sorrow and shock from the Nation's leaders.

President Truman, who heard the news by radio just before 7 a. m., said:

"I was inexpressibly shocked and grieved to hear of the death of my friend James Forrestal. This able and devoted public servant was as truly a casualty of the war as if he had died on the firing line."

Later, the President issued a formal proclamation officially announcing Forrestal's death and proclaiming a period of national mourning for him.

Knowledge of the death spread slowly during Sunday's early morning hours. Later, it traveled swiftly and with shaking impact.

"Oh, dear God! I'm sorry to hear that," Representative Leslie C. Arends (R., Ill.) told a United Press reporter who telephoned him. Arends, GOP whip in the House and a member of the Armed Services Committee, then added:

"I had a great admiration for Mr. Forrestal. I think he did a terrifically good job, and he was under so terrible a strain for so many years."

"Oh, that's terrible, terrible!" said Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) of the House Armed Services

Driver in Accident Flees Into Woods, Is Found Hanged

A 49-year-old Potomac Electric Power Co. guard was found hanged from a tree limb in the woods near Gainesville, Va., yesterday about 400 yards from the scene of an automobile accident in which he was involved Friday night.

He was Ray Henry Cowden, of Merrifield, Va.

Two persons were slightly injured in the accident, in which he was a driver, they said, but no charges had been filed against Cowden. Cowden had been dead from 24 to 26 hours, according to Dr. E. H. Marstello, Prince William County coroner, who issued a certificate of suicide.

Steel Firm Reduces Sheet Metal Prices

Washington, Pa., May 22 (AP).—The Washington Steel Corp. today made price cuts on light gauge stainless steel sheet ranging from 11.66 to 26.67 per cent.

The reductions affected gauges 27 through 36. The economies were made possible, the company said, through its new method of cold rolling stainless sheet on the Sendzimir mill.

Spy Hunters Told Batory Is Used as Red Shuttle Ship

By the United Press

House spy hunters have been informed that top Communist agents use the Polish liner Batory—Gerhart Eisler's escape ship—as a shuttle between the United States and Europe, reliable sources said last night.

They said the subcommittee will announce public hearings on the matter later on.

They said the subcommittee was tipped that a "Communist big wheel," identified only as "Al," used the Batory to escape surveillance by American counteragents. A man named "Al" was mentioned in House committee hearings last fall. He was identified as a correspondent of Steve Nelson, Communist Party organizer for western Pennsylvania, accused of receiving atomic secrets from a researcher.

Battle Looms on Extension Of Trade Act Without Curbs

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Administration's long-postponed battle to extend the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act, free of GOP tariff restrictions voted by the last Congress, may get under way in the Senate this week.

Start of the fight will find Republicans closely organized to preserve if they can their "peril point" system of non-mandatory Tariff Commission recommendations to the President.

Democrats, led by Senate Finance Chairman Walter F. George (Ga.), are out to abolish the GOP limitations, contending they are "unduly restrictive" and prevent the trade program from operating at maximum efficiency.

The trade agreements skirmish, though it no longer involves the long-moot question of whether Congress will return to tariff-making, is about as close as Congress gets these days to an old-time tariff fight.

But the basic early differences between the two major parties, high tariff versus low, still remain and many of the votes may be party line. Republicans today are chiefly out to put some check on executive tariff decisions without denying the President final power.

Thus, under the 1948 act, the Tariff Commission would advise the President how low he could safely reduce tariffs without damaging American industry. The President doesn't have to accept this advice. But if he cuts below a "peril point" he has to report to Congress later why he did it.

The two-year extension of the trade program, minus peril-point restrictions, already has passed the House.

Whether the Senate reaches the trade agreements bill this week will depend on Senator George. The Georgian entered Emergency Hospital last week for a check-up, and leaders postponed action on the bill until his return. After the check-up, George's office said the Senator "is fine."

Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) said the Senate has two or three other bills on tap pending the Georgian's readiness to proceed with the reciprocal trade agreements bill.

These include a bill strengthen-

2 GI 'Spies' Freed by Czechs, Then Are Arrested as AWOL

Eisenstein, Germany, May 22 (U.P.).—Two American soldiers sentenced to long prison terms as "spies" were released by Czechoslovakia today, but were immediately arrested by American authorities for being absent without leave.

Recruits Clarence R. Hill of Jackson, Miss., and George R. Jones of Owensboro, Ky., were seized by United States constabulary troops at this German town on the Czechoslovak border a few minutes after they were dumped out of a Czechoslovak car.

They said they had been beaten badly on the head and feet by Czechoslovak agents trying to get information from them.

The men were arrested December 9 in Czechoslovakia and subsequently were convicted of espionage in a secret trial. Hill was sentenced to 12 years and Jones to 10. They were pardoned May 18 by Czechoslovak President Klement Gottwald, it was revealed today in Prague.

Lieut. Col. Charles Y. Talbot of the Staubing Constabulary headquarters said when arresting Hill and Jones:

"It's ridiculous even to suggest they were spies. They got into trouble simply by being drunk and looking for German girl friends on the wrong side of the border. They were common AWOL's. Don't try to make heroes of them."

Forrestal's Pen Came to Rest On Word of Sophocles Tragedy

Some suggestion of the last thoughts of former Defense Secretary James Forrestal may be found in a partially copied poem found after his death. He had stopped abruptly in the middle of a word.

The manuscript in his handwriting was found tucked in the back of a volume in red leather, "An Anthology of World Poetry," lying open on the radiator beside his bed. The poem, titled "Chorus from Ajax," is from the work of Sophocles, Greek tragic poet who died in 406 B. C.

In the original drama, a tragedy of wounded honor, Ajax, son of Telamon, is first demented by disappointment when the arms of Achilles have been awarded to Odysseus. Upon his recovery, Ajax is stricken with grief and shame and fatally stabs himself with his own sword.

In the anthology, only the following chorus appears. The portion copied by Forrestal—in a firm, legible hand on hospital memorandum paper—is printed here in italic type, the remainder in roman type. Forrestal stopped

Walter Denies Using 'Pressure' For James Firing

By The Associated Press

Representative Walter (D., Pa.) said yesterday, "I have brought no pressure and haven't tried to bring any pressure" to have Roy James dismissed from his Government job.

James, a Republican who ran unsuccessfully against Walter last November, said Saturday the Civil Service Commission has ordered the Army Department to dismiss him from his $8500-a-year post or to transfer him.

The Civil Service Commission said James lacked qualifications for the position. But James and his friends have said they feel the action is the result of political pressure exercised by Walter.

Walter told the Associated Press:

"All I did was ask the Civil Service Commission what qualifications are required for the position James is holding and what qualifications James possesses.

"I never at any time requested that he be dismissed. I have brought no pressure and haven't tried to bring any pressure. I never took the case up with the White House."

'49 Red 'Manifesto' Rejects 'Overthrow'

New York, May 22 (U.P.).—William Z. Foster, national chairman of the United States Communist Party today issued what amounted to a "Communist Manifesto—1949." It said Communists do not advocate the forcible and violent overthrow of the United States Government because communism "is inevitable, war or no war."

He termed his document "the new tactical line of the world Communist movement, including the American Communist Party." This new line, he said, is that war is no longer inevitable, because Communist forces have become strong enough to "compel the fascist imperialist monopolists to keep world peace."

". . . Capitalist violence cannot defeat socialism (communism)," he declared. "The people's right of revolution cannot be denied. If a peaceful path to socialism is open to the people, that is the road they will always take. But if capitalist reaction and violence forces them to fight for socialism, then fight they will, and as history shows, successfully. The future belongs to socialism, and capitalism, with all its violence against progress, cannot possibly change the main course of history."

The manifesto apparently drew the battle line on which the defense will stage its last-ditch fight to gain acquittal here of the 11 top United States Communists now on trial for conspiracy and to have the party declared a legal political group in this country.

Foster is not on trial. He was indicated on similar charges, but his case was detached from the present trial on the ground that he was too ill to stand trial now.

The keynote of the Communist defense, the new document indicates, will be that it is "stupid" to think the Communists favor the overthrow of the Government, since a Soviet America is "inevitable."

Other highlights of the document were:

1. The danger of war comes "entirely from the American big capitalists, who are being made desperate through the failure of their capitalist system and the irresistible advance of socialism."

2. Establishment of communism in all countries will "complete the cycle of revolutions which the United States and other countries are inevitably passing through in their advance from lower to higher stages of society."

3. Communism is the "highest stage of society."

4. Communists are "always and instinctively the champions of peace and democracy. This is true even when they have to wage wars and revolutions against barbarous oppressors and exploiters."

5. Communists "pick up the sword . . . only when they have no other alternative."

6. The violence of the Russian revolution was not the work of the Communists, but of the "czarist capital reactionaries."

7. The violence in China is the work of Chiang Kai-shek.

8. If Germany had been communized after World War I, the danger of war would have been "forever banished."

9. All capital is "basically Fascist."

10. If the western democracies had supported the Soviet Union's "intelligent anti-Hitler united front plan, World War II could have been prevented."

11. The war could not have been won without the Communists.

12. If it had not been for the Red army, the world today "would be under the heel of the Fascist barbarians."

Lilienthal Resignation Asked

and the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Lilienthal stated.

"The accomplishment of this advance in this period of time is the answer to Senator Hickenlooper's vague and ungenerous wholesale indictment," he said.

Hickenlooper noted that the amount of U-235 reported missing was only four grams, but he said that is a vast quantity for research purposes.

Further, he said, the Atomic Energy Commission did not notify the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy of the loss until more than two and a half months after the U-235 disappeared. Hickenlooper said the law requires immediate notification.

Hickenlooper is a member of the joint committee and, when the Republicans were in power in 1947-48, was its chairman. He fought hard for Lilienthal's confirmation when the latter's qualifications were challenged on the floor of the Senate two years ago.

In addition to his biting criticism of the AEC for its handling of the missing U-235, Hickenlooper hit hard at the commission for granting scholarships to persons the commission's own security officers would not clear for access to secret information.

One of those AEC scholars, Dr. Isador Edelman, young Boston medical researcher, is to appear before the joint committee today.

Hickenlooper said:

"It is my hope that after Dr. Edelman's appearance the necessity for making public spectacles of Mr. Lilienthal's mistakes will be eliminated. I hope the AEC will now quietly cancel all fellowships of students who cannot qualify as good security risks."

The commission announced Saturday that non-Communist oaths and affidavits will be required of all 497 persons who have been certified for the AEC scientific fellowships. Hickenlooper stood on his statement, declining to comment on this development.

Status of Students

Up to now the commission has required security clearance only of students whose study involves secrets. These number 103. Another 154 are doing non-secret research and study. The remainder of the 497 have not yet begun their courses.

"In addition to these two highly publicized fiascos by Mr. Lilienthal and the AEC," Hickenlooper stated, "in my opinion there is now perhaps even more serious evidence of maladministration.

"It is my considered opinion in the light of the record of the past two years, that the interests of the Nation can best be served by the President's requesting the resignation of Mr. Lilienthal."

At the outset, Hickenlooper said the time has come "for some plain talk." He said that not only is the commission "staggering under daily disclosures of evidence of incredible mismanagement," but that the joint committee is about to start a series of public hearings which could turn into "a carnival of confusion."

These, Hickenlooper said, are the facts about the missing uranium-235:

"A container of about 9 or 10 ounces of uranium oxide enriched with 32 grams of uranium-235 was discovered missing at the Argonne National Laboratories, Chicago, on February 8, 1949.

"The AEC chairman, David E. Lilienthal, has attempted to minimize this quantity. He has sneered at the Nation's 'four-gram jitters'. The truth is that for research in the field of weapon development this is a vast quantity of this precious material. Dr. Allan Nunn May, the British scientist, drew a 10-year prison sentence for stealing one one-thousandth of a gram of U-235; and we began building Hanford (the atomic installation at Hanford, Wash.) before we had as much as is still missing.

"The AEC, in direct violation of its duty did not notify the Federal Bureau of Investigation of this loss until March 28, 1949.

Required by Law

"The AEC did not notify the chairman of the congressional committee until April 27, 1949, though the law requires that such notification be made immediately.

"When this loss was reported publicly on May 17, 1949, by the New York Daily News, Mr. Lilienthal replied that the loss was trivial and that it was being partially recovered from 'waste.'

"There is no satisfactory evidence to support this claim. It is true that some U-235 is being recovered from waste—this is a process which goes on constantly—but there is no satisfactory evidence that what is now being reclaimed is, indeed, from the missing parcel."

Hickenlooper said that while there is no conclusive evidence that a theft has been committed, there is no conclusive evidence that one has not.

After Strike Battle in Berlin Station . . .

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

PROTECTED—A beaten, bloodied East zone railway policeman (hatless) is roughly taken into "protective" custody by uniformed British sector policemen at Charlottenburg railway station in Berlin yesterday. Russian sector railway police had fired pistols into a crowd of 300 non-Communist railway strikers. The station is in the British zone

Burmese Take Stronghold of Karen Rebels

Rangoon, Burma, May 22 (AP).—Burmese troops occupied the Karen stronghold of Insein today, an official army announcement said. The shell-battered suburb 10 miles north of Rangoon had been the scene of bitter fighting for months.

News of the army advance came as Burmese newspapers reported a split among some of the many groups that have been in rebellion against the government of Premier Thakin Nu.

Insein, an important road and railway center, had been held by the Karens since January 31. While it remained in rebel hands, Rangoon largely was isolated from north Burma.

Progovernment sources said Burmese troops moved into the town without opposition after the Karens crossed the Hlaing River in darkness Saturday night.

Clark Urged to Halt Publishing Red Lists

By the United Press

The American Civil Liberties Union yesterday asked Attorney General Tom C. Clark to stop publishing lists of "so-called" subversive organizations.

If it is not practicable to halt the lists, the union said, the Government should give hearings to all organizations claiming error. It contended that the lists "are used far beyond their intent to create general discrimination against these agencies."

Bar Against Workers Tolerating Reds Urged

By the United Press

A house spy hunter said yesterday Americans who are too "tolerant of Communists" should be barred from Government jobs even though they personally are loyal to this country.

The statement was made by Representative Burr P. Harrison, (D., Va.) a member of the House Un-American Activities Committee, in an address at Luray, Va.

not from Berlin must be withdrawn.

3. Western Berlin police should be the only guards allowed on rail territory.

4. The management should order its stations to charge Westmarks and thereby collect enough money to pay workers in such currency.

There were hints in the official Soviet army newspaper that a compromise may be reached on the question of paying wages in Westmarks. That is the main point at issue in the strike.

Fifteen Russian-controlled police, tired of firing on fellow Germans, voluntarily surrendered to Western sector police and turned in their arms.

The policemen who surrendered had been on duty at the Charlottenburg station, where they had watched their fellow officers fire into a crowd of 300 strikers.

The strikers had been cleared from the station earlier. They surged back, however, and tried to storm a train bringing men, women and children from the Soviet sector to occupy elevated railway stations already wrested from the strikers.

Gunfire began when strikers leaped aboard the engine of the train and set the brake. Eastern sector police fired as they rushed the train.

The strikers threw rocks as they fell back. About 1000 persons were cleared from the rail yards. They lined up along an embankment just off railroad property.

Some members of the crowd broke into a newsdealer's store nearby, seized hundreds of copies of the Socialist Unity (Communist) Party newspaper Neues Deutschland and made a bonfire with the papers in the station square.

Arrest of Zlatic, 3 Others by Tito Regime Revealed

Prague, Czechoslovakia, May 22 (AP). — The Communist newspaper Rude Pravo said today Dr. Savo Zlatic, former Minister of Light Industry in Yugoslavia, and three other political figures had been arrested by the Tito regime in Belgrade.

The newspaper said Zlatic had been slated to be the Yugoslav Ambassador to Moscow but was not sent because he defied the policy of the Yugoslav Communist Party.

Russians Seize U.S. Sergeant's Austrian Wife

Vienna, May 22 (U.P.).—Soviet soldiers have arrested Josephine Murphey, Austrian wife of a United States Army first sergeant at Enns, zonal checkpoint between American and Soviet sectors, it was announced today.

Army authorities said First Sergt. John K. Murphey reported his wife was arrested when the couple presented their credentials yesterday at the demarcation line.

The authorities said Soviet agencies in Vienna advised them Mrs. Murphey had been arrested in her husband's car for "abusive language and assault" on Soviet Army soldiers.

The Russians said her release will have to be "discussed at a high level" because of the seriousness of the charges, Army officers said.

Murphey, of Augusta, Ga., denied that his wife was unruly or used insulting language

U. N. Economic Board Rejects Probe of U. S. 'Discrimination'

Geneva, Switzerland, May 22 (U.P.).—The United Nations Economic Commission for Europe concluded a two-week session early today after rejecting a Polish-Czech proposal to investigate alleged United States discrimination in trade with eastern Europe.

Although decisions of the commission are usually unanimous, the "cold war" spread to this session and split the delegates into Western and Soviet blocs.

The Polish-Czech proposal, defeated 11 to 6, was in the form of an amendment to a resolution adopted unanimously by the commission establishing a permanent ECE committee to further European trade.

The amendment asked the trade committee to take note that "trade discrimination" practiced by the U. S. Government is harmful to trade in Europe.

Russia, Byelo-Russia, the Ukraine, Yugoslavia, Poland and Czechoslovakia all voted for the proposal. The U. S., Britain and France led the western European countries in voting it down.

Filipino Fears Attack on Korea If GIs Leave

Seoul, Korea, May 22 (AP).—The Philippines member of the United Nations Commission on Korea today disclosed he was asking the commission to disapprove withdrawal of American troops until Korean political and security problems are solved.

Dr. Rufino Luna said he believed withdrawal of American soldiers from South Korea at this time "might invite invasion by the north."

North Korea is ruled by a Communist regime created before the Russians announced withdrawal last Christmas.

House to Get Bill For Public Works

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The House early this week will get a bill to set up a Government building program for immediate use in case of widespread unemployment.

The measure, known as the Chavez bill, already has passed the Senate. Its aim is stated clearly in the report of the Senate Committee on Public Works, which reported that "the bill will fulfill the need to build up a storehouse of plans now against the day when a Government building program may become necessary or desirable because of economic conditions."

It is the first of several measures offered to advance the same program. The measure has three titles:

1. To authorize the appropriation of 40-million dollars to buy sites and prepare plans for public buildings outside the District of Columbia.

Transfers Authorized

2. To acquire additional lands within the District and to transfer other properties outside the District from one Government agency to another for "the purpose of better utilization and administration."

3. To provide 30 million dollars for "acutely needed renovation of Federal buildings outside the District." This would apply only to major repairs and would not be used for jobs costing less than $25,000.

Administration officials said last night the program had been given "the green light" by the Budget Bureau. It thus becomes part of the White House program that, when first presented last January, was more concerned with anti-inflation measures than with defenses again deflation.

There are several outstanding reasons for the program:

1. There are pressing needs for many Federal buildins, such as postoffices, Federal courthouses, etc. Federal Works Administrator Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming is quoted as saying two billion dollars could profitably be spent in the next year on these categories alone. The cost of such construction could be amortized in 15 to 20 years by savings from rents paid by Government agencies, improved efficiency, etc.

Postoffice Space Needed

2. This type of construction largely was postponed during the war to divert men and materials to the war effort; it was postponed again after VJ-Day to direct men and materials to housing for returned veterans and for delayed factory construction.

In the Postoffice Department alone, the demand for space is terrific. A recent increase in express rates so increased the demands on Parcel Post facilities that study now is being given to the need to restrict further Parcel Post mailings. Scores of cities now lack postoffice facilities to handle business efficiently.

There has been no postoffice construction since before the war. In the meantime, there has been an increase of about 10 per cent in population and also sizable migrations that have brought great increases in demands.

Planning Called Necessary

The Senate report on the Chavez bill said the policy set out in the bill is necessary for some sort of order in such Government building.

Already there are scores of bills before both Senate and House calling for Federal construction in individual localities.

"Unless a sound policy is established for handling bills of this type, it is anticipated that there will be a flood of additional individual bills," the report states.

"At present there are about 4000 such proposed and needed buildings to be constructed throughout the country. The committee is not equipped to pass on the merits of eligible Federal buildings and make priority selections."

Farm, Business

15-Year U. S. Subsidy Bill: $15 Billion

By the United Press

Uncle Sam has forked out close to 15 billion dollars in direct subsidies to farmers and businessmen during the past 15 years and may dole out another half billion by July 1, 1950, the Budget Bureau disclosed yesterday.

In a hitherto unpublished study, the bureau gave the dollars and cents story of how much the taxpayers have paid out to keep producers from losing money.

For the 14 fiscal years ended June 30, 1948, the Government paid out $14,525,217,000 in what the Budget Bureau called "direct" subsidies to farmers and businessmen.

It defines subsidies to mean "direct financial assistance paid to businesses or farmers in order to bridge the gap between cost of production and the existing or desired market price, or to stimulate businesses and farmers to accomplish some desired public objective."

This takes in a host of Government payments—farm price supports, the wartime subsidies to food producers and distributors to keep prices down, soil conservation payments, shipping subsidies, and others.

It leaves out a number of Government programs that involve some form of Federal aid to special groups. These include Federal grants to States, pensions and relief funds, payments to foreign governments, loans and loan guarantees, the Commerce Department's trade promotion activities and payments for transportation of air mail.

By far the largest share went to farmers. The Agriculture Department will have dispensed about $10,881,000,000 through June 30 for various aids to producers of food and fiber.

Biggest single item is an estimated $4,973,000,000 to farmers for soil conservation practices.

Some of the other items that took big chunks of the Government's subsidy pot, as estimated through next June 30, are:

Agriculture Adjustment Act payments for reducing production of crops and livestock (discontinued in 1937)—$1,205,000,000.

Wartime subsidies to food producers and distributors to keep up production and keep prices down, distributed by the Commodity Credit Corporation and Reconstruction Finance Corporation—$4,944,000,000.

Maritime Commission subsidies to help pay the cost of building ships and help meet losses in operating expenses—$397,000,000.

Government price supports to prevent farmers from earning less than a specified percentage of "parity"—$247,000,000.

Trade Act Battle Looms

ing the Armed Services Unification Act and a high priority security bill implementing the central intelligence agency.

Ready for House action today are bills giving the Foreign Affairs Committee subpena powers and authorizing a survey of public buildings projects.

On Tuesday the House will take up either the displaced persons bill or the executive pay raise measure. The latest Rankin veterans pension bill, this one granting needy veterans little more than they can claim under present law, will be called up Thursday.

The economy motif, though thus far it's been all talk and no action, will hold sway in the Senate. The locale will change from the Senate floor to the Senate Expenditures Committee. That group, headed by Seantor John L. McClellan (D., Ark.) today will take a look at the Tyding plan to chop 2½ billion dollars over-all from all appropriation bills at session's close.

New Economy Drive on Housing Program Started by GOP as Leaders Assail Bill

By The Associated Press

House Republican leaders yesterday made the Administration's multi-billion dollar housing program the target for a new economy drive.

And Representative Taber (R., N. Y.) assailed it as "socialized housing." He declared that "by voting funds for Federal housing, we are buying high-priced future slums, through shoddy construction, indifferent and irresponsible management, waste and abuse of public money."

Republican leader Martin, of Massachusetts, called a mass meeting of all GOP House members for today to shape party policy on the bill.

Emphasizing the economy drive, Martin told a reporter:

"The time is unfortunate for any new legislation calling for huge Government spending. It might mean new taxes and shove the Nation into a depression."

That is the feeling of a majority of the House Republican Policy Committee, Martin said. He declared that estimates on the cost of the housing bill run from 16 billion dollars to 19 billion dollars over a 40-year period.

Chairman Spence (D., Ky.) of the House Banking Committee, predicted the House will pass the bill. The Senate approved it April 21 by a 57-to-13 vote. But some Democrats said privately that if near-solid Republican opposition develops, with some Democrats joining this opposition, the measure may be defeated.

The bill goes before the House Rules Committee today. That committee refused last year to clear the legislation for House action, after the Senate had approved it. However, new House rules provide procedures for by-passing the Rules group if it tries to bottle-up legislation.

The House bill provides for a five-year program of slums clearance in cities, for 1,050,000 low-rent housing within seven years, and for farm housing aids. The Senate bill is along the same general lines.

Taber, who is senior Republican on the Appropriations Committee, issued a prepared statement. He said:

"President Truman does not come before the American people with clean hands in this matter of public housing. He and his predecessor deliberately put the housing program in the hands of men whose guiding impulse is the expansion and extension of socialized housing. . . .

"As far as I have been able to determine, these men have an unbroken record of never having done a good job on behalf of the American public at any time, anywhere.

The New Yorker described one Federal housing project in his district in these words:

"It consists of approximately 120 units. Twenty-five per cent of these are empty. The empty ones are in a disgraceful condition. Doors are open, windows broken, the heating apparatus carried off by vandals.

"In other words, 25 per cent of this Federal housing project has developed into a Government-owned and controlled slum—all this, in spite of the fact that the project has a manager, two mechanics and two secretaries."

U. S. Carrier Saves Man Dying at Sea

The aircraft carrier Philippine Sea swerved off her course yesterday, and the life of a retired Massachusetts gardener was saved.

Ever since he had quit work, James Morgan, 61, of Brookline, Mass., had longed for another look at his native Ireland.

So he set sail, in the Marine Slasher, a former Army transport.

Five hundred miles out a peptic ulcer that had been bothering him began to give him trouble. He had a rare RH negative blood factor.

A call for help was sent out. The Philippine Sea, homeward bound from the Mediterranean, turned aside.

By this time Morgan was in such bad shape that he was transferred to the carrier. Fortunately, all its men are blood-typed. Four gave the blood Morgan had to have.

lated, so Mrs. Martin jumped in to help him.

When her efforts failed, Mrs. Martin swam a hundred feet to an approaching rowboat. Its occupants, William Murray, 3327 23d st. se.; Richard Frick, 3249 23d st. se., and Frick's wife, Ann, pulled her into their boat.

Ann Arundel County police said they did not know whether the occupants of two boats were in one party, but it was known that they knew each other.

Mrs. Martin became hysterical after the incident, they said, and was taken to Emergency Hospital in Annapolis.

Soper's body was recovered later in the evening, but storms prevented further dragging for the other victim.

Calls to the addresses of the victims for further details brought no response.

Savings Bond Map Dedication Wednesday

A giant map, now being erected in Post Square to show state quotas in the Savings Bonds drive, will be dedicated Wednesday at 12:30 p. m.

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder will speak at the ceremonies at which Vernon L. Clark, national director of the U. S. Savings Bonds division, will preslide.

The map will be used for weekly progress reports toward the quotas for the States and for the District. The District's quota is 12 billion dollars in Series E bonds.

The District Women's Bar Association will honor the memory of one of its late members, Miss Helen Carloss, at a service in the conference room of the United States Supreme Court Building at 5:30 p. m. Wednesday.

Miss Carloss

Miss Carloss argued more cases before the Supreme Court than any other woman in her capacity as Special Assistant to the Attorney General. A former employe in the Bureau of Internal Revenue, Miss Carloss worked mainly in tax appeals cases. She died in 1948.

Attorney General Tom Clark, Judge James W. Morris of District Court and Judge Nadine Lane Gallagher of Municipal Court will speak at the service.

Graduation Tuesday At Marjorie Webster

Graduation exercises for the 1949 sophomore class at Marjorie Webster Junior College, 7775 17th st. nw., will be held in the college auditorium at 11 a. m. Tuesday, May 31.

President John W. Nason of Swarthmore College will deliver the commencement address before the graduating class of '49.

Rochester Man Is Elected by Hearing Group

Dr. C. Stewart Nash of Rochester, N. Y., was elected president of the American Hearing Society here yesterday at the annual meeting of the group's board of directors, in the Hotel Washington.

Other officers elected were first vice president, Mrs. A. Ellis Hunt, Newtonville, Mass.; second vice president, Dr. Westley Hunt, New York City; secretary, Mrs. Francis E. Lee, Maumee, Ohio; treasurer, Claude W. Kniseley, Washington; assistant treasurer, Norman C. Napier, Washington.

New members elected to the board at a morning session of the Middle Atlantic Zone Conference of the American Hearing Society were Dr. Norton Canfield, New Haven, Conn.; Mrs. Harry W. Rubel, Los Angeles, Calif.

The next national conference will be held June 15 through 17 in 1950 at the Drake Hotel in Chicago.

Detective Saves 7 From Fire

Seven persons, two of whom were burned, one seriously, were rescued by a Prince Georges County detective from a fire which consumed their Upper Marlboro, Md., home early yesterday.

Those injured were:

Richard Cole, 34, the father, who is in fair condition at Casualty Hospital with first, second and third degree burns on the face, chest, hands and forehead.

John Cole, 24, a brother, was burned and cut on the hands and knees and was treated by the Marlboro Voluntee Fire Department.

Five other members of the family, including a 2-year-old baby, were uninjured.

Detective Sergt. John W. Siddall was driving on the Crain Highway near the Hall's tobacco warehouse in Upper Marlboro about 5 a. m. when he saw the flames.

He sent an alarm over his police radio calling the Marlboro firemen, and then broke a window on the first floor. He ran upstairs, where he found the family huddled, too terrified to flee. Siddall drove them down the stairs to safety.

The home was almost totally destroyed before the fire was put under control in two hours.

The blaze was believed caused by an overheated oil lamp in the kitchen. The house was a two-story six-room frame building. Damage was estimated at $4000.

things only their own way and bickered constantly, Forrestal felt morally restrained from cracking down.

The loose wording of the unification act and the vast, inherent powers of the President as Commander in Chief, could have been used to bring about more centralized authority and "more unification." But Forrestal felt much of this would violate the spirit of the act.

Whether his way—evolution—would have succeeded, we'll never know. Given a long period of time, many believe it would have. But the American public was impatient.

Forrestal literally worked 18 hours a day, 7 days a week, trying to make his way succeed. His active, philosopher's mind unceasingly probed all phases of America's national security—seeking to insure that nothing was neglected, no possible solution unexplored.

This often led him to step into other people's fields—such as foreign policy and the independent Maritime Commission. His uncompromising attitude, where what he considered essential security interests were involved, made enemies. Forrestal's activity in the Israeli question was unpolitic, to say the least.

Was Hurt Deeply

He never answered the often-vicious press and radio attacks that persisted almost until his death. Forrestal felt that a man in public life opened himself to such criticism. But, nevertheless, they hurt deeply.

The late defense chief also was a worrier. His responsibilities rested heavily on his wiry shoulders. He had the valuable but unhappy faculty of seeing the merits of both sides of any question, and —particularly toward the end— fretted over decisions even after they had been made and announced.

Of Irish Parentage

A success at everything he had tried previously, Forrestal hated to give up the defense post under fire from some quarters and with the job of unification incomplete. The week before he left office, the Secretary—gaunt-eyed and nervous—told this writer he was giving up his post with mixed emotions. He did not elaborate, but it was obvious he looked forward to a rest and respite from worry and onerous duties—a rest that now has come.

For James Vincent Forrestal had been a dazzling success at everything else he had attempted. Born at Beacon, N. Y., February 15, 1892, the son of an Irish contractor, he grew up in modest circumstances. A Catholic, he later left the church.

"Most Likely to Succeed"

"Vince" Forrestal—as he was known at home—went to Dartmouth for a year, after working for a time for his tuition. He then switched to Princeton and was editor of the Daily Princetonian. During his senior year—he left before graduation—he was voted "Most Likely to Succeed."

Afterward, Forrestal turned from newspaper reporting to selling bonds. During World War I, he became a Navy pilot, rising from apprentice seaman to lieutenant, junior grade. After the war and a brief return to newspaper work as a reporter on the old New York World, he took a job with the investment house of William A. Read Co. (later Dillon, Read & Co.).

His rise on Wall Street was rapid. By 1933, he was a partner and in 1938 became president of Dillon, Read. Some biographies refer to Forrestal as the "boy wonder of Wall Street" and for years his annual income was in the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Came to Washington in '40

President Roosevelt brought Forrestal to Washington in 1940, as one of his administrative assistants. As a Democrat from Roosevelt's home county and something of a liberal for a financier, he was a valuable contact with Wall Street.

A few months later, the former banker with the build of an athlete got a new job. He was appointed to the new post of Undersecretary of the Navy, charged with building a "two-ocean fleet" in record time. So successful was Forrestal in handling the production side of the Navy that when Frank Knox died in 1944, the former financier—largely unknown to the public—was the obvious choice for the Navy Cabinet post.

Navy Got Head Start

Forrestal's record as Navy Secretary also was outstanding. He started postwar planning long before VJ-Day and, when the services were unified in 1947, it was found that the Navy was laps ahead of the other services in most fields.

Legislation had been enacted for an effective naval reserve program, and the reserve—unlike the Army and Air Force—actually was in being and relatively well-trained.

Naval procurement and administrative procedure had been overhauled to meet a future war emergency. The highly important job of cataloguing and taking inventory of naval squipment and spare parts—now getting started for the unified services—was well under way.

Was a Modest Man

While Undersecretary and Secretary, Forrestal got out to the war areas as often as possible. He felt it important to keep Washington in touch with the needs of the fighting men. He was under fire at the front several times.

One story illustrates two of the late Secretary's most pronounced traits—his modesty and sense of humor. Dressed in khaki shirt and trousers, he was watching the opening phases of one of the Pacific landings from the bridge of a warship. A Navy bosun's mate walked up to the bare-headed official.

"Where's your cap, Buddy," he asked.

"Am I supposed to wear a cap?" grinned the Undersecretary of the Navy.

Tells Concept of Job

After the war, Forrestal led the Navy's fight against Army proposals to merge the armed forces completely. When the compromise bill was worked out, the Navy chief was agreed on as the best choice for Secretary of Defense. It was felt necessary to pick someone who had been through the wartime "battle of Washington" and for one reason or other, the remaining top defense officials were eliminated.

"My concept of my job," Forrestal said after he was sworn in, "is that I am a member of a team working to a common end. If I have to use authority I might as well get out of the job."

Before another year had passed, however, he was convinced that he would have to use authority to do the job. Reluctant to exercise the latent power of his position beyond the spirit of the Unification Act, he asked Congress to amend the law to give him additional authority. Legislation granting his successor such power comes up for debate in the Senate today.

Little Part in Campaign

During the presidential campaign last fall, Forrestal took little part in supporting the Democratic ticket beyond helping raise money. Newspaper critics declared he was in bad with the White House for this. They also accused him of carrying on behind-the-scene negotiations with the Dewey forces in anticipation of a GOP victory.

There is reason to believe, however, that in both cases Forrestal's stand—aimed at keeping national defense out of politics—had Mr. Truman's approval.

Earlier, he had been mentioned as a possible Democratic vice presidential nominee. Forrestal flatly ruled himself out, however, declaring he never had visualized himself as a "political glamour character."

Disliked Making Speeches

An essentially shy man, he hated making speeches and public appearances. And, strangely, for a former reporter, he had the Wall Street tycoon's typical aversion to the press. While a few newsmen were his friends, Forrestal never would make a move to meet and possibly placate his columnist critics.

Yet his relations with Congress were good. For some reason he could get along with Senators and Congressmen whose views and personalities he disliked.

Forrestal was an unusual combination of intellectual and sportsman. He was widely read and often surprised acquaintances with his knowledge of the latest ideas in music, philosophy and economics. When he found time to read, no one knew.

In contrast, his golf score was in the 80's and he played a good game of tennis and squash. Forrestal's abdomen was as flat as a hurdler's—even before the toll of the past year—and he had a smashed nose, the relic of a boxing bout 20 years ago.

He dressed like a well-to-do suburbanite sportsman—often wearing gray flannels and a seersucker jacket where most Government officials favor business suits.

The former Secretary married Josephine Ogden, then a fashion editor of Vogue, in 1926. They had two sons, Michael, born in 1928, and Peter, born in 1931.

Resigned In March

Forrestal resigned as Secretary of Defense in March. The reasons for his departure at this particular time never were entirely clear. President Truman, congressional committees and service chiefs highly praised his contributions and appeared reluctant to let him go.

It was reported he was out of favor with the White House due to his mixing into foreign policy, or for other reasons.

Contributing, at least, to the decision to accept Forrestal's resignation was the condition of his health. He was at about the end of his tether when he left the Pentagon two months ago.

Observers today are too close to the scene to judge adequately the first Defense Secretary's achievements. However, here are some of his contributions to unification:

1. Unified control of all legislative matters under a single office directly under the Secretary of Defense.

2. Similar merging of public-relations activities—just now being put into effect.

3. Consolidation of all air and sea transport activities of the armed forces into one unit, with similar action begun for land transport.

4. Joint use of military and naval hospitals.

5. Long strides toward completion of a single budget and spending control system for the armed forces—a very complex job.

6. Even greater progress toward joint or cross procurement of supplies for all the services.

7. Preparation of a modern, uniform code of military justice for the armed forces.

8. Drafting of a new pay system for the services based on compensation for responsibility—the first major revision in 40 years.

9. Creation of a top-level board to provide an independent evaluation of new weapons or whole weapons systems proposed by one service.

10. Assignment of roles and missions to the armed forces at the Key West and Newport conferences.

11. Revitalization of the Joint Chiefs of Staff by the recall of General Eisenhower as chairman.

12. A start toward elimination of the "Franklin Field rivalry" in the armed forces and its replacement by a wider loyalty to the armed forces of the United States.

13. Rebuilding the Army, Navy and Air Force from their weakened condition after demobilization.

Much of this is only a beginning of a unification program Forrestal used to say would take 5, 10 or even 20 years to complete. Unbiased observers feel he might have moved faster, but generally concede his plan was sound and probably will form the basis of the armed forces' future.

What man is he that yearneth
For length unmeasured of days?
Folly mine eye discerneth
Encompassing all his ways.
For years ever-running the measure
Shall change thee in evil wise
Grief draweth nigh thee; and pleasure
Behold it is hid from thine eyes.
This to their wage have they
Which overlive their day,
And He that loseth from labor
Doth one with other behind.
Whom bride nor bridemen attend
Song, nor sound of the lyre,
Death, that maketh an end.

Thy portion oftenest I highest,
Who wait not ever begot;
Thine next, being born who did
And straightway again art not.

With fallow light as the feather
Dark Youth to man befell;
Then evils gather together.
There were not one of them all—
Wrath, envy, diamed, thrift,
The sword that maketh life
And pulling the roses of wonder
Dish-turning Age drew nigh,
When friends and kindfolk fly,
Age, upon whom revileth
All sorrows under the sky.

This man, as we, even so,
Have the evil days overtaken;
And like as a cope co-shaken
With seagulf at earth's full verges
And death of all winds that blow,
His head the roar of woes,
The thunders of overleaf surges
Bursting overthew;
Blows from the fall of eve,
Blows from the dayspring forth,
Blows from the noon in heaven,
Blows from night and the North.

CHORUS FROM AJAX

Fair Salamis, the billow's roar
Wanders around thee yet;
And sailors gaze upon thy shore
Firm in the Ocean set.
Thy son is in a foreign clime
Where Ida feeds her countless flocks,
Far from thy dear remembered rocks,
Worn by the waste of time,—
Comfortless, nameless, hopeless—save
In the dark prospect of the yawning grave.
And Ajax, in his deep distress
Allied to our disgrace,
Hath cherished in his loneliness
The bosom friend's embrace.
Frenzy hath seized thy dearest son,
Who from thy shores in glory came
The first in valor and in fame;
The deeds that he hath done
Seem hostile all to hostile eyes;
The sons of Atreus see them and despise.

Woe to the mother, in her close of day,
Woe to her desolate heart, and temples gray,
When she shall hear
Her loved one's story whispered in her ear!

"Woe, woe!" will the cry,—
No quiet murmur like the tremulous wail
Of the lone bird, the querulous nightingale,——
But shrieks that fly
Piercing, and wild, and loud, shall mourn the tale;

And she will beat her breast, and rend her hair,
Oh! when the pride of Graecia's noblest race

Wanders, as now, in darkness and disgrace,
When Reason's day
Sets rayless—joyless—quenched in cold decay,
Better to die, and sleep
The never-waking sleep, than linger on,
And dare to live, when the soul's life is gone;
But thou shalt weep,
Thou wretched father, for thy dearest son,
Thy best beloved, by inward Furies torn,
The deepest, bitterest curse thine ancient house hath borne!

Delusions of Persecution, Acute Anxiety, Depression Marked Forrestal's Illness

The illness of former Defense Secretary James Forrestal, officially diagnosed as "occupational fatigue," was marked by a pronounced state of depression.

This condition, The Washington Post has been informed, expressed itself in a definite tendency to suicide and in acute anxiety and delusions of persecution. The following version of the course of his illness was given this newspaper:

While at Hobe Sound, Fla., following his resignation in March, Forrestal recognized in himself a definite tendency toward suicide. As a result he took the initiative in having himself returned to Washington and admitted to Bethesda Naval Hospital.

When he arrived here by air, he was extremely nervous and expressed fear of physical violence from advocates of air power and from pro-Zionists. As Secretary of the Navy he had opposed unification, with its autonomous Air Force, and was dubious of the claims of air power zealots that they held the key to military success "with aircraft not yet designed."

His fear of reprisals from pro-Zionists was said to stem from attacks by some columnists on what they said was his opposition to partition of Palestine under a U. N. mandate. In his last year as Defense Secretary, he received great numbers of abusive and threatening letters.

Upon admittance to the hospital he was placed under the influence of sedatives and kept under them for several days, administration of these sedatives being gradually lessened until he was receiving only one sleeping tablet nightly. Saturday night, shortly before he leaped from a sixteenth floor hospital window, he even declined this single tablet.

Under treatment he gained weight and was making such promising progress that he was permitted to shave himself, and his bathrobe, with the cord which was found knotted about his neck, was returned to him. Saturday night he was restless but cheerful and got himself a cup of coffee during the night from the same diet kitchen from which he later leaped.

His psychiatrist, Capt. George N. Raines, apparently was quite satisfied with his progress for he left the Bethesda hospital to attend a psychiatric meeting in Montreal. Notified there of his patient's death, he left for Washington immediately by rail, air traffic being interrupted by bad weather.

Rear Admiral C. A. Swanson, Surgeon General of the Navy, said Dr. Raines would explain the case in some detail today.

Forrestal was admitted to the hospital April 2, but it was not until April 5 that his illness became generally known. Finally, some 10 days later, the Navy issued a statement which described his condition as "exhaustion" and "operational fatigue."

"His condition," the statement said, "is directly the result of excessive work during the war and postwar years. The only psychiatric symptoms are those associated with a state of excessive fatigue."

Men intimately associated with the former Cabinet member shortly before his resignation said the only noticeable symptoms of approaching trouble were increasing indecision, delay in reaching decisions and worry over small details. These men said Forrestal never exhibited any outward signs of concern over attacks on him or, for that matter, for praise.

"The Secretary," said one, "seemed to think those things were not important and that the only important thing was to do the best job he was capable of doing."

Speaking once of a particularly vicious attack by a columnist, Forrestal was said to have remarked that he "never could understand how people could hate each other" and that he had never hated anybody.

A former associate said the only thing Forrestal ever had to do with the Palestine question was to render a military opinion on Middle East oil, for which he had been asked. And he was said to have felt that his counsel had nothing to do with the decisions that finally were reached.

He was, however, worried at the continued harping of columnists on the theme that the military were "running" foreign policy. An intimate said he "leaned backward" to keep out of foreign policy decisions, feeling that the military were only an instrument for carrying out the aims of policy. In this connection, he was said to have been concerned that the military force the Nation permitted itself was probably inadequate to back up some foreign policy decisions.

Forrestal was said to have been genuinely relieved when his resignation finally was accepted. Friends said he had talked of leaving in the summer of 1948, but was persuaded to remain until after the November election to avoid even a suggestion of discord in the President's official family. After November, these friends said, he was persuaded to remain in the face of concentrated attacks in order to see the Military Establishment legislative program through Congress.

Psychiatrists Link Death Of Forrestal to Strain

Montreal, Quebec, May 22 (U.P.)—The American Psychiatric Association today described the Forrestal tragedy as "a familiar reaction to excessive stresses and strains."

"The war has shown that there is a breaking point for every one of us, if the pressures are great enough. No one is immune from the effects of stress and exhaustion," the association said.

Meanwhile, Dr. George Raines, U. S. Navy captain and Forrestal's personal psychiatrist, left by plane for Washington. He had been here for the association's 107th annual meeting, opening tomorrow.

Death News Shocks Leaders of Nation

Committee. "I'm awful sorry to he that news. He was truly a great man."

His successor as Defense Secretary, Louis Johnson, summed up his sorrow in two sentences: "The shock of Mr. Forrestal's death touches me deeply. I extend to his family and to his many friends m sincerest sympathy."

The White House was notified of Forrestal's death about an hour after it happened but Presidential Press Secretary Charles G. Ross chose not to awaken the President.

The President cancelled plans to attend a Gridiron Club reception last night.

The proclamation issued by Truman ordered the national flag to be displayed at half-staff from the White House, all public buildings, military installations, naval stations and ships at sea until after the funeral.

It said: "Mr. Forrestal served with devotion and great distinction . . . He exhausted his strength by his unremtting labors . . . His tragic death came as a shock to his friends and a great loss to the people of the United States whom he had served so well and faithfully."

Theme of Service

Throughout the statements of condolence, formal or informal, that came from a former President, Herbert Hoover, a former Chief of Staff, General Eisenhower, congressional leaders, Cabinet members, past and present, was woven the theme of service that brought about Forrestal's collapse.

Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, stunned by the news, said again and again: "He was a friend of mine. I had a great affection for him."

Former President Hoover said Forrestal was "a great public servant. He died in reality from complete exhaustion of nine years of labor in war and peace. He should be remembered gratefully by the American people."

"America has lost a citizen of heroic mold," said General Eisenhower. "In two world wars, in combat and in administrative positions of challenging responsibility, he dedicated all his strength and his talents to our country . . . Those of us who were privileged to share his friendship will remember his warm and unflagging spirit."

'Pioneer of Unification'

Acting Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray called him the "pioneer of unification of our armed forces (who) suffered all the hardships which come to any man who is a true pioneer of a great cause."

John L. Sullivan who succeeded Forrestal as Secretary of Navy when he advanced to the newly-created Defense secretaryship, said: "The entire Navy joins with me in mourning the passing of this distinguished public servant . . . He truly gave his life for his country."

Chester W. Nimitz, retired Admiral of the Fleet, said at Endicott, N. Y., he was "deeply shocked and distressed" by news of Forrestal's death. He described Forrestal as "a fine man, a great man," and added:

"We who worked with him will never forget his great contributions to our country's effort in wartime and in peace."

Air Force Secretary Stuart Symington said: "After many years of personal and official association with Mr. Forrestal his death comes as a great shock."

Attorney General Tom Clark said, "Forrestal was a great American and did a great service for his country. He was a fine soldier and a fine citizen."

From both parties on Capitol Hill poured expressions of astonishment and personal grief. House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.) said, "I deeply regret his passing. He was a very able and fine citizen and he performed a great service for his country."

"Result of Overwork"

His Republican counterpart in the House, Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin (R., Mass.), said, "This is a great loss to our country. Mr. Forrestal was a notable patriot and his sad death is directly the result of overwork in a time of great crisis."

Forrestal's death was called by Former Secretary of the Army Kenneth Royall a "sacrifice . . . to our victory in World War II and to our strong postwar military posture."

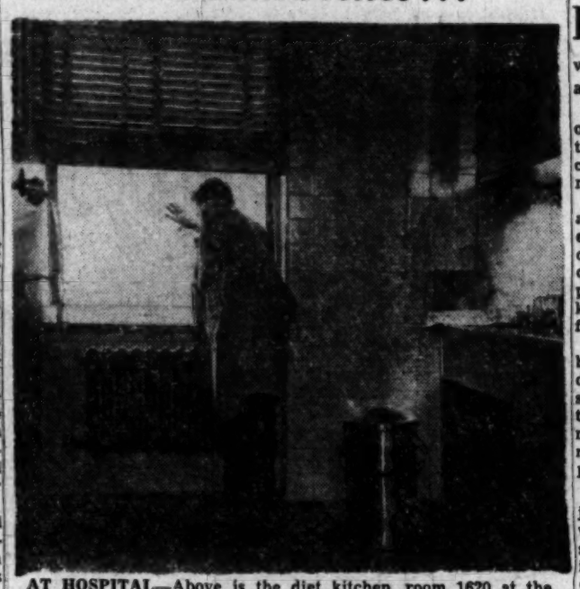
Former Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson said: "Our country has lost one of the greatest patriots and one of the most devoted men that we have ever had the good fortune to have. I am overcome with grief."

The grief at Forrestal's death spread to Paris, where the American delegates to the Big Four conference shared the shock felt by their countrymen at home.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson said those who had known Forrestal so well "had hoped and expected that rest would restore his reservoirs of strength . . . The entire Nation will regret that this will not be true. My own sadness at the loss of a friend and colleague is deep indeed."

Roving Ambassador W. Avrell Harriman, also in Paris, said Forrestal's "effective work for his country in peace and war will overshadow in history the tragic circumstances of his death."

Forrestal Death Scenes . . .



AT HOSPITAL—Above is the diet kitchen, room 1620 at the Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md., with a reporter standing at the window from which former Secretary of Defense James Forrestal plunged to his death early Sunday morning. The diet kitchen is across the hall from the room occupied by Forrestal, who was under treatment for "operational fatigue" were removed, and the psychiatrist left on a trip to Montreal.

Forrestal was given a large room on the sixteenth floor, connecting through a bathroom with a physician's room on the northeast corner of the hospital building.

He was allowed to see visitors and to go out of the room whenever he wanted, into the hall and down a few steps to a floor nurses' desk, where he could use a telephone. He could also use the diet kitchen directly across the hall from his room.

Previously, an attendant had been in his room constantly, but during the past three weeks the special watch had been relaxed the point that he was alone in his room, though still visited every five minutes by a hospital corpsman.

Refused Sedative at 1:45

The log kept by R. W. Harrison, jr., H.A., corpsman on the special watch from 9 p. m. to 6 a. m. showed that Forrestal was sleeping when he made his 1:30 a. m. check. At 1:45 a. m., according to a hospital official, Harrison found Forrestal awake and had tried to give him some sodium amytol, as was prescribed, but Forrestal said he did not need any.

Harrison woke Comdr. R. R. Deen, who was in charge of Forrestal and who was sleeping in the adjacent physicians' room. The doctor said if Forrestal felt he did not need the sleeping tablet, it was all right.

At 1:50 a. m., Harrison returned to Forrestal's room and found he was not there. He immediately reported the fact to Dr. Deen.

A moment before, a nurse, Lieut. (j. g.) D. Turner, who was on the seventh floor in the same wing of the building, had heard a thud from outside a window. She gave the alarm, and attendants found the body on the asphalt roof of the third floor directly below the sixteenth floor diet kitchen. Forrestal's wrist watch was still running.

The windows of Forrestal's large room, which had been made more spacious by the removal of one bed, had heavy double screens equipped with locks.

The window in the diet kitchen, on the other hand, has only a single screen, hinged at the top, with two light hooks at the bottom. It swings out. Forrestal had frequently been in the kitchen. He was on a special diet which included two extra meals.

Forrestal, who was the first Secretary of Defense under the Military Unification Act, resigned last March at 57 years of age. His admission to the hospital was because of a condition that was "directly the result of excessive work during the war and postwar years," according to Navy Capt. W. B. Hogan, then acting hospital commandant.

Forrestal's wife was in Paris when the tragedy occurred. She took off for Washington last night in President Truman's personal plane, the "Independence," with her son, Michael, 21.

A second son, Peter Forrestal, has a summer job as a copy boy at The Washington Post, and is living at the family home, 3508 Prospect ave. He is a student at Princeton University.

The Independence had just taken Secretary of State Dean Acheson to Paris for the four-power meeting which begins today.

Mrs. Forrestal had arrived in Paris on Friday to find a private home for her husband where he could rest when he was released from the hospital.

She had gone to France after her husband's condition seemed so improved that he would soon be leaving the hospital.

Officials said Forrestal had become tired of having an attendant constantly in his room, and as his condition improved, it was decided that removal of the constant watch would be of therapeutic value.

Recent visitors received by Forrestal included President Truman and Louis Johnson, Forrestal's successor as Secretary of Defense, according to Rear Admiral L. O. Stone, hospital commandant.

During the past few weeks, Forrestal was allowed to have any visitors he wished to see, a medical officer on duty said, adding that no log was kept of such visitors.

Admiral Willcuts said "that type of suicide is impossible to prevent," adding that "you can't take a man of his brilliance and put a guard over him all the time. There were fewer and fewer restrictions as his condition improved."

Forrestal's body was taken to the hospital mortuary. Funeral plans will await the return of his wife, who is expected to arrive today.

President Truman's order for a period of national mourning brought flags to half staff on all public buildings, military installations and United States ships at sea.

Pearson Says Forrestal Tried to Take Life 4 Times

By the United Press

Radio Commentator Drew Pearson said last night former Defense Secretary Forrestal made four unsuccessful attempts to take his own life.

He said the fourth attempt "was frustrated" only two weeks ago by employes at the Bethesda Naval Hospital.

He said the former Cabinet officer had tried to hang himself, had slashed his wrists and had ta an overdose of sleeping pills while was in Florida.

Rear Admiral L. O. Stone, commanding officer of the hospital, informed of Pearson's report of a fourth suicide attempt, said quickly, "That's denied. There's nothing to it."

Pearson, who frequently was critical of Mr. Forrestal, said his death was a "great tragedy" and that the "entire Nation will mourn.

Mr. Flanagan's Record

Frank J. Coleman's appeal to the President to name "someone else" in place of Chairman James H. Flanagan of the Public Utilities Commission was probably a complete surprise to the Washington public. Mr. Flanagan has the reputation of being one of the most conscientious and fair-minded officials serving the District, and we think it is a well deserved reputation. His method is that of every eminent figure in the field of public utility regulation: to find the facts and let the facts serve as the basis for judgment as to whether utility rates are too high or too low. To be sure, the PUC has not been able to satisfy all groups who would like to see lower utility rates. But it has acted with a keen sense of the public interest in the largest sense of the word, which necessarily takes into consideration constant improvement of service and financial stability of utility corporations as well as the public desire for the lowest feasible rates. As a result, Washington has one of the lowest electricity rate schedules in the country, and transit fares here compare favorably with fares paid in other cities.

If Mr. Coleman, who is secretary of the Washington Central Labor Union, has any facts to sustain his charge that Chairman Flanagan does not have the public interest at heart, he would do well to bring them to light. Otherwise the public is likely to relate his complaint to the refusal of the commission to act on the Central Labor Union's recent protest against the hiring of nonunion labor by the Potomac Electric Power Co. Obviously the PUC cannot dictate to utility companies as to their labor policies. Since one of the marks of a good utilities commissioner is determination to do his duty even when it is unpopular with some groups, something far more tangible than this incident would be needed to cast any reflection on the fine record of Mr. Flanagan.

Battle Of The Files

The 1949 battle over the right of Congress to inspect confidential files of the executive departments has brought some new champions to the fore, but essentially it is the same old battle that has been fought over and over again. This time Chairman McCarran of the Senate Judiciary Committee is in the role of challenger. His demands are directed at Attorney General Clark and John E. Peurifoy, Assistant Secretary of State, but, of course, it is President Truman himself who must make the final decision. What the Senator is seeking and what the Departments of State and Justice refuse to yield are 168 files on "subversive activities" of foreign agents in the United States.

Some of the disputed records are said to deal with subversive activities on the part of Government employes and others with the admittance of aliens into the United States. In both instances confidential data assembled by the FBI are involved. The Department of Justice has made clear on many occasions that disclosure of these reports would gravely complicate the work of the FBI by cutting off its sources of information. It is also unmistakably clear that to make public reports of this kind, including gossip and unevaluated statements, is a grave injustice to the individuals. For these reasons President Truman, quite properly, we think, has forbidden executive officials to give Congress access to files on the loyalty of Government employes, without his express permission.

This newspaper has repeatedly emphasized the danger and injustice of divulging confidential personnel records. At the same time, we recognize the right of Congress to know what is happening in the executive branch. The McCarran Subcommittee, which has issued subpenas to Messrs. Clark and Peurifoy, is considering legislation to make it more difficult for espionage agents to enter the United States. Obviously it is entitled to full information on this subject, although its purpose might be adequately served by full factual reports from the State and Justice Departments without submission of the actual files. If the subcommittee believes that only the files will service its purpose, why could it not deputize one of its member to examine the files in return for a pledge that legitimately confidential data would not be disclosed? It would be difficult for the executive agencies to object to this procedure in view of the routine practice of allowing committee members to see FBI reports on candidates for the judiciary.

If it comes to a showdown, both sides have powerful weapons at their command. The President can withhold documents until and unless commanded by the Supreme Court to yield them. Congress can slash appropriations, abolish positions, publish confidential data it already has (as Senator McCarran threatens to do) or resort to the impeachment process. But the public interest will necessarily suffer if either branch resorts to arbitrary methods. "It is well to remember," as we pointed out a year ago when this issue arose, ". . . that, while we have a separation of executive and legislative powers, we have one Government and not two." The McCarran Committee has a moral obligation to respect the confidential nature of FBI reports and the departments have equal obligations to give Congress the information it needs in shaping legislative policy.

Economy Fiasco

The economy drive has fallen flat. When the Senate failed to slash anything from the $751,440,000 bill for the Army's "civil functions" it passed by what is probably its best opportunity to trim the prospective deficit. The bill as it was passed adds 158 million dollars to the measure approved by the House in spite of all the economy talk heard recently in the Senate. Where will that body now look for economies?

One reason for the Senate's stubborn attitude, judging from the debate in the Congressional Record, was the fact that in calling for a 40 per cent reduction in the bill Senator Douglas overplayed his hand. In the old days, he said, a bill of this sort was "commonly, if irreverently, referred to by the people as 'the pork barrel.'" Later he declared that "there are huge quantities of fat in this bill. Let us build a hot fire and fry out three hundred millions of the fat." That threw the fat into the fire, but none was fried out.

As the debate progressed, it developed that Illinois is getting a substantial slice of these funds for river and harbor work and flood control, and Senator Douglas appeared before the Appropriations Committee in behalf of the Illinois projects. That does not, of course, invalidate the argument for a general reduction in the appropriation, but it certainly weakened the kind of argument the Senator made. His reference to the pork barrel, even though he later said that he was merely citing the usual public reaction and not expressing his own opinion, aroused many Senators to a defense of projects in their own States. The attention of the Senate was concentrated upon the individual projects and the fact that expenditures must be cut as the only alternative to incurring a deficit or raising taxes was lost to sight.

Senator Douglas did get to the basic issue before the debate was over but after tempers had been frayed and local issues magnified. "Virtually every project, taken by itself," he said, "can be defended. Virtually every project does some good. The question is whether it is worth the price we must pay at this time." If it were simply a matter of spending money for useful work, the list of projects could certainly be expanded many fold. But to pile a new deficit upon the existing mountain of Federal debt for the sake of financing an enormous volume of rivers and harbors work in this time of relatively full employment seems to us to be execrable judgment.

Substantial long-range economies can doubtless be effected by turning over this civilian work of the Army Engineers to other governmental agencies operating in the same field, as recommended by the Hoover Commission. We hope the Senate conferees will insist on keeping the door open to this reform in the Government reorganization bill now in conference. But Congress must also face the necessity of postponing useful and desirable (though not essential) projects if higher taxes or fiscal irresponsibility is to be avoided.

THE GREEN WALLS

We know walls where the vines
Cling like tenacious glory
And only man's designs
Are changed and transitory.

These walls, to dust returning,
While vines no longer climb
But cling, are still man's yearning

Such walls may shut us still
From their slow history
Or take us in, to fill
The heart with mystery.

We, who with faith have stood
Against all winds that vary,
Know green walls of the wood
Open to sanctuary.

We know, though earth is worn
And scarred where death has been,
That green walls of the corn
Will part . . . and let us in.

GLENN WARD DRESBACH

The Tragedy Of James Forrestal

The tragic death of James Forrestal comes with such a stabbing suddenness that the sense of shock is almost numbing. For this the doctors and their bulletins are in great part to blame. They had prepared his friends and an army of well wishers for a slow but firm recovery. And then this! There has been something wicked, as we have said several times, about the disingenuousness with which the illness of Mr. Forrestal has been handled. The authorities lied when they said he entered Bethesda naval hospital for a routine checkup. That sin, for which some reparation was made in later accounts, seems to have been compounded by the cheerful news that came regularly from the hospital. The medical men certainly owe an explanation either for their false reporting about Mr. Forrestal's condition or for their carelessness in looking after their distinguished patient.

James Forrestal suffered from a combination of ills. A fatigue arising from overwork and overworry extended back at least 12 months. The exhaustion of the man had been the subject of private comment long before he resigned. He was inconsecutive in conversation, indecisive in conclusion. But there were mental and spiritual complications which dogged the body and harassed it in its effort to recuperate. An inner conviction seems to have seized James Forrestal that his career had been a failure. It produced a despairing and all-encompassing anxiety in a man who had hitherto appeared to the world as so hard and earthy as to be lacking in any neurosis. No matter how involved a situation, there is always a key, and we are convinced that this was it. Then there was something in the nature of a last straw. He who had appeared to be indifferent to what was said about him felt a new torment in the talebearing and false witness of persons in his vicinity. It was all too much to bear for a man worn out by exertion and fearfully troubled in spirit.

Few men can have started life with such a soaring ambition to succeed. It was an honest American ambition. He had none of the world's advantages to begin with, but by dint of hard work and shrewd planning and a gift for friendship he won position and fortune in Wall Street. Yet he never had any narrow view of his future. He thirsted for public life and went into it with zest and the same ambition to succeed. Here he got to the top—as the Nation's first Secretary of Defense. As the saying goes, he made good. But it always seemed to us that his yardstick of success became different from his hedonistic youth's as he accumulated years. He seemed to be that rare person who acquires ideals as he grows older; or perhaps he realized too late the real values of life. Whatever the fact, it added to his desolating sense of failure.

Certainly he felt thwarted and frustrated in trying to develop, de novo, an organization out of the new Department of Defense. The fact was that the job simply could not be done. Trifles and details he had to deal with, for the scheme of organization had no responsible links, only a yawning chasm between his eyrie and the bickering military services under him. Yet, ironically, this was the only "scheme" that he, a Navy man at heart, would consent to. It was a kind of quadruplication, as we put it at the time, that Forrestal headed in the name of unification or integration. He felt impotent. The same feeling of impotence gripped Forrestal in other aspects of his work for the national security. While seeking to make this bastard organization jell, he had a share in foreign policy-making, since the prevailing diplomacy in the cold war was more in the nature of strategy. His major mistakes occurred in this department. For instance, he miscalculated the equation in the Middle East—the result of relying upon oil magnates and missionary educators, all of them advisers who were unrealistic, though on different grounds. It was the chagrined way Mr. Forrestal afterward confessed his error about the Middle East that produced the impression that a breakdown was imminent.

Another mistake lay in his overestimate of the military needs for this Nation. In this respect he succumbed partly to military badgering for all that the traffic would bear, partly to an obsession that the Cold War was the prelude to a shooting war. This obsession became an idee fixe as time went on. At any rate, Secretary Marshall, as one of his last acts, fought the inflated military budget that Forrestal sponsored, and the President, to his credit, backed Marshall. Forrestal's minimum of 22.5 billion dollars became 14.3 billions when the estimates went to Congress. This was another depressing experience for James Forrestal, hurting him not so much because his counsel had been rejected, but because the country was oblivious in his view to the mounting danger from a sudden attack from Moscow. It may be said that he was a casualty in the war of nerves, as well as a victim of the terrific burden he had assumed.

"Jim" Forrestal, as he was always known, was shiningly honest, one of the most natural men that ever came to Washington, an officeholder who grew but never swelled, so loyal to his friends and colleagues that many of them almost idolized him, and true as gold to the trust that the people always repose in their public servants. He hated sham and humbug and pose. The airs that the usual run of men translated into high office give themselves made him "tired." He had a passion for intellectual truth which he sought in voracious reading. Whether he digested what he read is another matter. At any rate, his reading made him a full man, but it never gave him a working philosophy of life or determined his actions. He looked tough, with his stocky little figure and broken nose, but he belied his looks. He gave a curious impression of a man everybody and nobody knew. He combined a solitary soul with a gregarious disposition, and his lack of serenity was betrayed by the spasmodic restlessness with which he sought the society that diverts but does not satisfy.

To sum up: James Forrestal's reach was so much higher than his grasp that the effort to connect them broke him. The loss will be mourned from the heart by those who saw this struggle in progress, and admired him for it. Measured by sincerity, James Forrestal was a great man, and probably no man who has appeared on the Washington scene in a post of authority was more likable, or evoked more affection.

Freistadt's Fellowship

John B. Regler's letter of May 18 might better have been written after he had read Marquis Child's "Free Inquiry and the Atom," and Dr. Robert Oppenheimer's statement read before the Joint Atomic Energy Committee, both of which were reported in the same issue carrying Mr. Regler's letter.

This might be a "Big, Wide, Wonderful World" if the ability to conduct basic research in nuclear physics were confined to piously avowed anti-Communists and people who could unfaltering sing the second verse to "The Star-Spangled Banner." Aptitude, unfortunately, is not so confined. The work of Joliot, the French Communist, cited by Dr. Oppenheimer is an illustration.

Should the work of the German scientists brought over to America be rejected because these scientists could not pass a loyalty test? Even if the hypothesis that all Communists work for the Kremlin is to be accepted, would Mr. Regler prefer that Hans Freistadt go to Russia and exercise his talents there? Einstein, Fermi, and Meitner could not meet the current definitions of Italian and German "loyalty" and so they and their researches were exiled. Who were the losers in that application of a test of ideological conformance?

The requirements for obtaining a grant from the National Research Council are rigorous. All applications are carefully screened and only those offering the highest qualifications are accepted. The council, in the public interest, is desirous that public funds should not be wasted on subsidizing the incompetent. Freistadt's qualifications met the council's standards. The fruits of his researches will accrue to the United States.

The need to maintain security safeguards in matters directly pertaining to national defense is not questioned. There is also the need, however, to differentiate between precaution and the indulgence in a phobia.

Mr. Regler's interests as an American citizen and taxpayer will better be served if Hans Freistadt proves loyal to the spirit of scientific inquiry rather than merely automatically adhering to the political tenets approved by Mr. Regler.

'Natural" Gold Price

In recent months several articles in The Washington Post have referred to the United States Treasury price of $35 per fine ounce as being the price of gold in this country. It does not appear to be generally known, outside mining circles, that "natural" gold, may, under the terms of the Gold Purchase Act, be sold on the open market for whatever it will bring.

In the last year, as a result of the spread of the knowledge of this fact, more and more gold producers who are able to do so are taking advantage of this provision of the law and are disposing of their gold on the open market. Prices quoted appear to be around $40 per fine ounce.

"Natural" gold has been defined as gold in an unworked or unrefined state. It does not include the product of the retorting of gold amalgam, or gold recovered in the refining of other metals. It has been reported that many placer gold producers, and some mining lode gold, are modifying their recovery processes to obtain gold that can be regarded as "natural" gold.

I am not a lawyer, but it seems to me that an interesting legal point is raised by the existence of a ready market for gold at more than the United States Treasury price. It is this: If some gold can legally be sold for a higher price, and does in fact command a higher price, then in compelling the sale of any gold for less than this price, the Treasury is in fact taking the property of the gold miner without the payment of just compensation—if just compensation is equated to fair market value. It would be interesting to see this point tested in the courts.

"Spain: The Test"

In reproaching Southern Congressmen for meretriciously consorting with Franco you exclaim, in your editorial of May 13, "And since when did American Senators look at governments and forget peoples?"

Do you really believe it unprecedented for us to pervert the purpose of diplomatic recognition? Then you are not cognizant of our most calamitous violation of international morality. On January 11, 1934, the United States Senate confirmed the appointment of Mr. Bullitt as Ambassador to the Soviet Union, and by that act lied that the Bolsheviki were the de jure government of the Russian people.

Coincidentally, one of the most seductive inducements for committing the perjury was the prospect of selling 50 to 60 million dollars worth of raw cotton and 30 million dollars worth of cotton textiles to the Communist Party on credit (naturally), the American taxpayer financing the transaction (naturally). Prohibiting Strikes

Perhaps it would be an understatement to say that 75 per cent of our people are tired and disgusted with strikes, picketing and maneuvering by politicians to win and hold the votes of organized labor. Would it not be easy to eliminate politics, the danger to our economy and restore tranquillity to repealing the Taft-Hartley law, the best yet, but not good enough, and promptly substitute a law prohibiting organized strikes in all essential industries and transportation? Labor-management tribunals, manned by experienced, competent judges to hear both sides of all disputes which fail in collective bargaining could be established, and render impartial, factual decisions to be binding on all parties concerned.

It would be little short of an outrage for a Congress elected to serve the best interests of all the people to pass a new law that would leave the door wide open to a possible all-inclusive strike that would deprive large segments of our population of food, heat and transportation and wreck our economy.

Editorial Balance

As one of the "sniffling scholars," apropos your May 19 editorial on the National Geographic magazine, I should like to commend you on your excellent group of editorials of May 19.

Having spent two years in Evanston, Ill., I have particularly appreciated a newspaper with a good balance of important international, national and local news.

Each of the editorials fitted into my natural geographic interest, particularly my interest in political geography, for even F. D. R., Jr.'s. victory in New York is important within our own country. Keep up the good work and you will well deserve the Pulitzer Prize recently awarded one of your group.

Statehood For Alaska

The House Appropriations Committee just turned down our request, made through President Truman and the Budget Bureau, for nine million dollars for pulp mill access roads in Alaska. The first 33 million dollar rayon pulp mill in the Territory will be started this summer in Ketchikan.

Congress almost included us in the Federal Highway Aid Act but thought better of it and then, when World War II came along, the Government paid several times as much for roads as it would have if the longtime program had been in effect. You are, in fact, paying for Alaskan Statehood but not enjoying its advantages. As a State we'd have had about 12 million dollars yearly in United States highway grants. Those roads would have attracted tourists who would have left money in Alaska.

Three years ago the writer went with Congressman Jed Johnson to Glacier Bay where Alaskans thought the Government might build a lodge. We hoped that a lodge would be the beginning of a multi-million dollar annual tourist industry.

The two times these funds got past the House Appropriations Committee, some Congressman took the money for a pet project. Yet the Government owns 99 per cent of the land in Alaska and the forest service until last year would not give a resort developer any but a one-year revocable lease to resort sites in an area much larger than the State of Maryland.

The Fish and Wildlife Service built up a great salmon packing trust in Alaska, with half a dozen companies controlling about 80 per cent of the fish traps. This same combine exercised thought control in Alaska until last fall when we broke its hold, elected a progressive Legislature and have just seen it pass the basic tax program that now makes Statehood easy to support.

The Indian Service schools up here have been allowed to run down. The Government closed 12 of them last year.

Congress long ago plowed under the oil, coal, forest and some of the mineral resources of Alaska. It promised to let us in on the public domain highway fund, then cut us out. It did the same with agricultural aid in the Adams, Smith-Lever and other Federal acts. Now it is worried that the Arctic can't support the troops and civilians it thinks it needs to make it strong.

All we ask is a simple Statehood enabling act now frozen in the House Rules Committee. No money, alms or arms. Just a chance to be full citizens at our own expense as you've been promising for 82 years.

Matter of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

Better Late Than Never

FOR FOUR LONG, sorry years, American policy in the Far East has floated, to put it plainly, like a chip of driftwood on a sluggish open sewer. The result has been the disaster in China. But this disaster has at least had a certain shock value. It has at least just led to the decision to formulate a clear, non-floating Far Eastern policy. And this is a great gain, even although it is not yet known precisely what the new policy will be.

The decision has just been taken with the blessing of President Truman. Ever since he took office, Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson has been pressing for a positive definition of our Far Eastern interests and program. Last week he is understood to have raised the question again, pointing out the need for some sort of action before policy-making was suspended by the departure of Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson for the Council of Foreign Ministers.

Concurrently, the State Department was also moving away from its previous hand-wringing passivity toward the Far East. Other influences were no doubt at work as well. At any rate, Acheson wisely agreed that we could no longer go on "waiting for the Far Eastern dust to settle," as the earlier attitude was euphemistically described.

THE CHANCES ARE rather heavy that this does not mean any serious effort will be made to save the remains of non-Communist China. The task in China seems to be regarded as too difficult, even although Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault's visit to Washington, to urge aid for China, helped to bring the matter to a head. On the other hand, the new decision very definitely means that all the rest of Asia will not be permitted to fall into the grip of the Soviet Union without protest or obstruction from this country.

This was, hitherto, the great danger. As General Chennault very cogently argued, the loss of China directly threatens all of southeast Asia. And if the wide, rich territories of Indo-China, Siam, Malaya, Burma and Indonesia should all be permitted to go the way of China, then both Japan and India would also be directly imperiled. Now, however, a line will be drawn somewhere to halt this process of Soviet conquest in the Far East. This is a great turning point, like the turning point when a line was drawn at the Greek and Turkish borders, to halt the process of Soviet aggrandizement in Europe and the Mediterranean.

So far as is known, the difference between the situation two weeks ago and the situation today is simply that the need to draw such a line and defend it has at last been agreed upon in principle. It seems unlikely that the line itself can be chosen without further study. The places to watch, however, are Indo-China, which is the political key to Southeast Asia, and Formosa, which is the strategic key to our own island Pacific defense line of Japan-Okinawa-Philippines.

"Better late than never," is the only possible comment. "But why so late?" is a question that may well be asked. The answer goes back to the period of 1941-44. That was the time when Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell and several of the most influential members of the State Department Far Eastern division were, for varying reasons, pursuing a sort of private war against the government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

THE BATTLES of those days ended with Stilwell's replacement by Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer. But their effects lived on. On a lower level, the majority opinion in the State Department Far Eastern division continued bitterly opposed to any effective aid to the anti-Communist forces in China. And on the highest level, General Stilwell's bitter personal hatred of Chiang Kai-shek and his government also left its heritage.

General Stilwell's friends and sponsors were Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson and General of the Armies George C. Marshall. Neither would listen to anyone but Stilwell about China in the 1941-44 period. Because of his China mission and his subsequent appointment as Secretary of State, General Marshall dominated our Far Eastern policy from the end of the war until last January. And in Nanking and in Washington, General Marshall adhered equally inflexibly to the opinions he had previously formed.

In Nanking, the representations of General Wedemeyer went unheard. In Washington, although Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett was allowed a free hand in all other fields, he could do nothing to secure decisions on Far Eastern policy. Marshall simply sat on the whole problem.

Secretary Acheson took office under the influence of the views of General Marshall, whom he deeply and very naturally admires. There was grave danger that our Far Eastern policy would continue to float, even after China had been lost. But now, fortunately, a different course has been chosen. Thus it is time to let bygones be bygones, and to prepare for the arduous and probably extremely disagreeable tasks of the future.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Senators, Scientists And Secrecy

UNDERLYING all the incidents, like that of the young Communist student who got a fellowship of $1600 for a year's graduate work in theoretical physics, there is a riddle to which no one can hope to find the perfect answer. It is how to guard a vital military secret — like production of atomic weapons — without destroying the conditions which made possible the discovery of the secret of producing them, and of other secrets that remain to be discovered.

Lippmann

AT BOTTOM, insofar as there is misunderstanding between so many Senators and most scientists, it turns on this: the Senators are worried lest the monopoly of the atomic bomb be lost, and the whole precarious balance of power in the world be upset; the scientists are worried lest an understandable but misguided zeal in protecting the monopoly retard the progress of scientific discovery in America, and leave us some day hugging an obsolete weapon.

That, they say, could happen to us. For though the bomb is now an American monopoly, the crucial scientific discoveries and the massive research and the creative reasoning which developed these discoveries were not an American monopoly in the first place, and are not now an American monopoly. And therefore, they contend, if in guarding, as we must, the military secret that has been discovered, we also discourage the process by which discoveries are made, we shall suffer what all nations have suffered where original and creative thought has withered away.

THIS IS a matter on which laymen, including Senators, must, if they are conscientious, seek guidance from men who have themselves participated in the discoveries and have lived all their lives with other men who labor to find out a little more of what no one has ever known. The Congress has never before had to deal seriously with men like these. It is used to dealing with many kinds of people, including engineers, applied scientists, inventors. But never before have the interests of Government become entangled with men who work at the farthest reaches of the human mind. Misunderstanding is unavoidable, and only humility and common sense—there is no neat formula—can keep the misunderstanding within manageable bounds.

That is all that we can expect to do—to pick our way through the conflict between the military need for secrecy and the scientific need for freedom. But as we pick our way we ought never to forget that the great military weapon was not made by military men or by public officials but by scientific men from all parts of the country and from many parts of the world. They know more about it than anyone else. If they told all they knew, only men like them would really understand them. They are the best, in fact the only, judges of what is really secret—a secret from their own peers—and what is merely not understood by the great mass of people who know nothing of the subject anyway. For to all but the very few everything that is written about nuclear physics might as well be written in Chinese.

THE EFFORT of laymen, who know virtually nothing about nuclear physics, to determine what is a secret and how to guard it, is rather like what would happen if say Senator Hickenlooper woke up one morning and found he had been appointed the censor of the Chinese Nationalist press. I hope I do him no injustice in assuming that his ability to read Chinese is no greater than his knowledge of the science of nuclear physics.

Now to Senator Hickenlooper—assuming him to be illiterate in Chinese — everything published in the Chinese papers would be an absolute secret, a complete and total mystery. How then would he proceed to make sure that nothing was published in the Nationalist press which would be of benefit to the Communists? One way, of course, would be to suspend publication of all the papers. If that did not seem feasible, he might get all the Chinese reporters, copyreaders and printers to sign their names to an oath not to reveal secrets. But that could not satisfy him because how could every Chinese reporter and copyreader know whether any particular piece of information was a secret or not?

SO EVENTUALLY — to continue but with apologies to Senator Hickenlooper — he would have to call in Chinese who can read Chinese and Chinese who happen to know all the military secrets of the Chinese. With their help he might make a reasonably efficient censor. Without their help, the best he could hope for when the record of his service was made up would be to get an A plus for effort and an A minus—because he had all the virtues except humility — for character.

Proposed Lending Regulations To Exempt Finance Concerns

Finance companies will be exempted from proposed regulations covering operations of money lenders in the District, Assistant Corporation Counsel Chester H. Gray disclosed last night.

The finance firms have vigorously opposed the rules, as based on "questionable authority" from Congress, when an attempt was made to extend them to regulation of their operations. The firms have contended additional laws were necessary to do this.

Gray said he had met with Martin F. O'Donoghue, chairman of the District Bar Association's small loans committee last week. O'Donoghue agreed with Gray that although the finance companies frequently purchase conditional sales contracts, thus extending a loan "in effect," this was not a loan "technically."

Gray said this decision to eliminate coverage of finance companies will probably clear the way for quick enactment of the regulations, since this has been the principal point of opposition.

He said the District License Committee will be asked to promulgate regulations on the firms, leaning on the Commissioners' powers to "require inspection, supervision and regulation" of various businesses.

The principal provisions of the proposed loan firm regulations include one spelling out the limits of insurance that the firms may require clients to take out, and another that would require the officials of firms to list their interests in any other businesses or licenses. Such information would assist in investigation of complaints about loan firm requirements of customers, Gray said.

He said the final draft will be completed this week and submitted to the District Commissioners.

6 Million Work For Government, U. S., State, Local

Chicago, May 22 (AP).—Nearly four million persons are on State and local government payrolls, the Civil Service Assembly reported today.

With 2,089,000 working for the Federal Government, the Nation's total number of government employes exceeded six million in January, the assembly said. The all-time high was 6,604,000 in January, 1945.

The agency credited postwar growth of cities, population increase of the entire Nation, and expanded State and local services with boosting State, city, county and school district employment to the all-time high of 3,994,000.

The increase in these categories of government employes last year was 135,000, but the assembly also noted a decline of 18,000 employes during the last quarter of the year—the first such decline since the war.

Rochester Editor U. S. Delegate to World Meeting

Paul Miller, Rochester (N. Y.) editor, was named yesterday to represent the American Society of Newspaper Editors at the first convention of the International Federation of Editors June 14-18 in Amsterdam. He will study whether the society should make permanent its one-year affiliation with the federation.

The federation was formed at Paris last June, aimed at combining working newspapermen of the world to improve journalistic standards and practices, and work for "peace and justice."

The ASNE affiliated itself for a year with the federation. Miller, a vice president of the Gannet newspapers, and editor of the Rochester Times Union, said:

"Frankly, we don't know too much about the possibilities of this international organization. I regard my attendance at the convention as exploratory on behalf of American newspapers. I'm going to reserve opinion until later."

What kind of a bank do I want?

If you as a business man asked yourself this question, wouldn't your answer be something like this?

"First of all I want a strong bank—one where my company's funds are protected by every safeguard."

That's how our directors feel too. That's why 99% of the securities we hold are short-term government bonds.

"I want a bank that's service-minded and able to reach decisions quickly just as I have to do.

Our officers are aware of the necessity of rendering quick service, and they realize that taking a business risk is part of the banker's function.

"I prefer a bank that can take care of any banking or trust service need my firm might have."

The Union Trust offers a complete range of banking and trust facilities for the large or small firm.

"I'd like a bank where my firm's account will be sufficiently important to receive the personal attention of the bank's senior executives."

The Union Trust is a growing institution, but our seniors make a point of giving close attention to business accounts.

If that's what you want in a bank, why not visit the Union Trust? Or simply phone us. We would be pleased to call on you to explain in detail how we can serve you.

Labor Chiefs Seen Easing T-H Stand

By The Associated Press

Senator Aiken (R., Vt.) yesterday said key officials of "two big labor organizations" have asked him to help work out a bipartisan, compromise labor bill.

Aiken said he has sounded out a group of Democrats about the proposition, but found them "apparently hamstrung by the White House's uncompromising attitude" on the Administration bill to repeal the Taft-Hartley law.

The Vermont lawmaker, a member of the Senate Labor Committee, told a reporter a group of "well-known, key labor leaders" recently called him off the Senate floor to discuss the matter.

"They seemed ready to agree to any kind of a reasonable compromise," Aiken said.

The Senator added he is not at liberty to name the labor leaders or the organizations they represent but he said they spoke with plenty of authority.

At the start of this session of Congress, all the big labor organizations were holding out for outright repeal of the Taft-Hartley law, with no consideration until later of possible changes in the old Wagner Act they wanted restored.

However, the big unions eventually did get behind the Administration's bill, which would junk the T-H law and at the same time re-enact the Wagner Act with some changes.

For a long time labor leaders refused to consider any compromises designed to win votes for the Administration measure. But after the recent shelving of that bill in the House—and the near-passage of a bill which would have preserved much of the Taft-Hartley law—some union officials were more willing to talk compromise.

Strike Voted By Carpenters For Pay Raise

The Carpenters District Council, representing about 6500 men in eight Washington area union locals, voted Saturday to go on strike for a wage increase, an official of Local 1590 said yesterday.

Axel Soderlund, financial secretary of the local, said the union carpenters, who now earn $2.40 an hour, gave notice in January to the Master Builders Association and Construction Contractors Council that they wanted an hourly wage increase.

Soderlund would not reveal the amount of the requested wage increase, but said the present contract had expired the last day of April, and had been extended 30 days.

Robert Reichard, president of the Carpenters District Council, and B. B. Blackburn, executive secretary, both declined to comment on the threatened strike.

Officials of the Master Builders Association could not be reached for comment.

Hugh Scott Accuses Truman Of Not Pushing T-H Repeal

By the United Press

National Republican Chairman Hugh D. Scott, jr., yesterday accused President Truman of not pushing for repeal of the Taft-Hartley law because he wants it as an issue in the 1950 congressional elections.

Senator McGrath (R. I.), national Democratic chairman, scoffed at Scott's accusation. He predicted that repeal of the Taft-Hartley law and many more of Mr. Truman's campaign promises would be carried out before Congress quits.

McGrath conceded, however, some planks of the Democratic Party platform probably cannot be carried out this year. But he did promise another Senate test of the President's civil-rights program. One such test ended in failure.

Scott and McGrath appeared in a discussion of "The Fair Deal—Success or Failure" over the American Television Forum of the National Broadcasting Co.

Scott accused the Democrats of gambling with the Nation's future with what he called their "experimenting" with labor legislation, taxes and economic planning.

McGrath replied that great progress was made when the Senate approved Federal-aid-to-education and housing legislation and that he expects the House to approve these bills soon. But he said no one expected the entire Truman program to be passed immediately.

Local Phone Firms Involved In Nation-Wide Union Dispute

By The Associated Press

A Nation-wide fight has broken out between labor and management in the telephone industry, and a torrent of law-suits and Labor Board cases is on the way.

The widespread scope of the fight became clearer over the weekend.

Bell Telephone companies from coast to coast have withdrawn recognition from the Communications Workers of America since it became a CIO union two weeks ago.

Industry sources said the Bell companies that now have taken such action include:

The Western Electric Co. and the Southern, Southwestern, Northwestern, Wisconsin, Michigan, New Jersey, Mountain States, and Pacific Bell companies; and the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone companies of Virginia, Maryland, and Washington, D. C. There are others.

'Fight This All the Way'

CWA official said today most divisions of the union will "fight this all the way."

That means resisiting the companies before the National Labor Relations Board and in the courts.

But each case is being considered separately. And three CWA divisions already have decided to furnish new dues-deduction cards, as requested by the companies. These divisions are Traffic employes in Washington and Traffic and Plant employes in Indiana.

Proof Is Demanded

The Bell companies are demanding proof that a majority of their employes want to be represented by a CIO union. They have suggested that new dues-deduction cards, authorizing the companies to make payroll deductions and turn the money over to the CWA, would provide this proof if a majority of the workers furnished them.

The companies also have petitioned the NLRB for new elections to determine what the employes want. And they have stopped giving to the CWA the union dues they now are deducting from payrolls.

Byrd to Uphold T-H in Spite of Blacklist Threat

By the United Press

Sen. Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.) said yesterday he would vote against repealing the Taft-Hartley law even though he is "blacklisted" by the emocratic Party and President Truman.

This was his answer to threats by Mr. Truman and party leaders to withhold party patronage from Democrats who fail to support the party platform, and who work against Administration bills in Congress.

It also was Byrd's reply, although indirect, to the President's reported statement that "there are too many Byrds in Congress." The President's remark was passed on to reporters by a White House visitor who had been discussing repeal of the labor law with Mr. Truman.

Byrd did not refer directly to the patronage threats, nor to Mr. Truman's remark. He spoke in a radio interview with Commentator Charles Parmer.

Ford Inspector Shot and Killed Through Window

Windsor, Ont., May 22 (U.P.).—A Ford Motor Co. inspector was slain by a shotgun blast through a kitchen window of his home early today.

William D. Allen, 37, was killed by an unidentified assailant as he sat at the kitchen table drinking coffee and reading a newspaper. His slayer jammed a shotgun through the window screen and fired into Allen's head at a distance of seven feet.

Nats Blow 2-0 Lead in 8th, Lose Out to Chisox, 6-4

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

THE BEST THING to come out of Hollywood since the Birth of a Nation is now playing left field for the White Sox, leading the American League in hitting, is tops in two-base hits and altogether the prize rookie of 1949.

He is Gus Edward Zernial, graduate of the Hollywood Stars of the Pacific Coast League, and now a cum laude performer with the White Sox. He has a batting average of .378, a solid grip on a major league future, and a pleasant modesty.

POVICH

"I guess I've been lucky," he was saying yesterday.

But a better guess is that he's a good hitter, says Manager Jack Onslow of the White Sox, who can admire 210 pounds of sinew, high-action wrists and a nice habit of laying off bad balls.

"If I'm wrong about Zernial, I'm at least in good company," said Onslow. "Every club in the league would want him if they thought there was a chance of getting him away from the White Sox. They're giving us credit for the fact that we wouldn't listen to any offers for Zernial."

HE DIDN'T COME up to the White Sox exactly unheralded. In the Coast League last year he hit 40 home runs and was second to Jack Graham, who hit 46. He batted .322, a nice figure, got more hits than anybody else in the league, led it in total bases, and drove in the most runs. Maybe Zernial is right. Maybe he had a great run of luck for six months.

Zernial might have been around last year except for the fact that he didn't watch his step in the White Sox training camp in California in spring training. What he did was step on a loose ball in practice and come down with a sprained ankle that took him out of action. The Sox wanted him making no first bid for the majors under that sort of handicap, and left him at Hollywood for another year of seasoning.

He wasn't going to make much of a splash as a defensive outfielder, anyway. Little bit too big to be very fancy. Had some trouble getting to fly balls in the Coast League a couple of years ago until Al Libke, the old Cincinnati outfielder, gave him a helpful tip. Zernial was wearing his cap too far back on his head, and getting no help from the visor on balls hit into the night lights.

RIGHT NOW, the most dismayed club in the American League must be the Cleveland Indians, if they are watching the success of Zernial, as most certainly they are. At a time when the Indians are screaming for an outfielder who can hit, it is no comfort to them to remember that they once had property rights to Zernial.

That was in 1946, after they claimed him from Atlanta, and decided to leave him in the minors. When they attempted to send him out, Hollywood had some kind of a claim to Zernial, and the Indians released him with no great sense of loss at that time. He'd look like pure gold in the Indians' outfield now.

There was a 25-month hiatus in Zernial's baseball career while he was in the Navy, fending off German and Jap subs as an armed guard on freighters. Zernial's ships were bombed a couple of times, but as he puts it, "I never got wet. I was lucky."

ORIGINALLY, ZERNIAL came out of Texas, around Beaumont, and his 6 feet 3 inches and 210 pounds fits the popular conception of a Texan. Right now, he says he's a bit underweight at 205. "Haven't got my full power."

He's no lusty swinger, though. None of the wrist-hitters are. He has his own philosophy about that. "I can do better meeting that ball than I can trying to kill it. And if I don't take that big swing, I've got a little more time to look at the pitch, and that helps."

Frank Shea of the Yankees struck him out the other day, pitching to what had been rumored as Zernial's blind spot—high and inside. Three innings later, he fed Zernial the same kind of pitch, and Center Fielder Cliff Mapes picked the ball up 400 feet later on the rebound off the wall.

A Family Treat

Godfrey Fans in Baltimore Coming Over for Celebrities

The National Celebrities Golf Tournament and the Arthur Godfrey show are drawing fans from out of town, too.

Yesterday's mail brought a request from a mother in Baltimore for four tickets to both of the big events.

"My family doesn't want to miss this year's Celebrities," she wrote, "so I thought I'd get my request in right now. Arthur Godfrey is a big favorite with everyone in my household and we are taking advantage of this chance to see him in person."

The Godfrey show will be held the night of June 4, beginning at 8:30, in the National Guard Armory. Arthur will bring his entire CBS radio cast with him and several big-name stars will appear as guests.

The Celebrities tournament, at the Army-Navy Country Club, June 4-5, will feature Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Godfrey, Sammy Snead, Dizzy Dean, Lefty Grove, Jimmy Thomson, Frank Stranahan and other national figures.

Tickets are on sale in The Washington Post lobby daily from 10:30 a. m. to 6:00 p. m., except Sunday, and at the Fairway, 1328 G st. nw., and the Sports Center, 8th and D sts. nw.

Prices for the tournament: Adult, season ticket (good for both days), $3; adult, single day, $2; junior (under 16), each day, $1. Season tickets must be purchased in advance, with a limited number going on sale.

Prices for the Arthur Godfrey show: Main floor, $5, $4, $3, $2. Balcony, $5, $3, $2, $1. All seats for the show are reserved except the $1 balcony tickets.

Macks Sock Tribe, 5-4, 13-4; Trail Yanks by 2

Philadelphia, May 22 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics won both ends of a doubleheader from the Cleveland Indians today for the first time since 1945 as Lefty Lou Brissie pitched a five hitter to win the nightcap 7 to 3.

An eighth inning double by Pete Suder scored Wally Moses with the winning run in a 5 to 4 opener.

The double win moved the second place A's within two games of the idle league leading New York Yankees.

Brissie was wild as he walked nine batters. He forced one Cleveland run across with four passes in the fourth inning and Larry Doby drove the other pair home with his fourth home run of the year in the seventh.

Philadelphia scored four times on one hit in the opening inning as starter Mike Garcia walked the first three batters. Gene Bearden relieved him and wild pitched two runs across while Elmer Valo's single drove in the other two.

Eddie Joost's eighth home run of the campaign accounted for Philadelphia's fifth run in the second inning. Hank Majeski doubled in two more in the seventh before the game was called because of the Pennsylvania Sunday blue law.

Philadelphia's winning run in the first game came in the eighth inning, when Pinch Hitter Wally Moses singled and Pete Suder doubled. The victim was Satchel Paige who allowed five hits in relief after Philadelphia had scored four times off starter Bearden.

Ferris Fain's first home run of the year after a single by Valo gave Philadelphia two tallies in the first round off Bearden and they picked up two more in the second inning when Bearden walked four in succession and Mickey Vernon tossed wildly to the plate in trying to cut off a run. Cleveland tied the score at 4-4 in the seventh on Mickey Vernon's fifth round-tripper.

Kell Hurts Back, Goes to Hospital

Boston, May 22 (AP).—George Kell, Detroit Tigers' third baseman, was taken to Deaconess Hospital "as a precautionary measure" today after injuring his back in the Detroit-Boston game.

Kell stumbled over the first base bag in the third inning when Johnny Pesky booted his ground ball. He left the game before the eighth inning shortly after trying to get Vern Stephens, who had grounded to him, out at first.

Rain Halts Hybla Races

Heavy rains around noon yesterday postponed the Eastern Roadster Racing Club's action scheduled for the Hybla Valley Speedway.

Track Manager Doc Benson announced that double-header roadster competition will be scheduled for Hybla next Sunday and Monday (Memorial Day) at 2:30 p. m.

Pannell Meets Weinberg For Duckpin Title

Cletus Pannell, of the Hutchinson Furniture team in the Men's Major League, and Abe Weinberg, of Winchester Packard, will meet in the finals of the Metropolitan match-play luckpin championships next Sunday at Colonial Village.

Pannell defeated two-time champion Bill King 4-3, and Weinberg turned back Frank Micalizzi, 4-2, in semi-final matches yesterday.

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

HOME AND HAPPY—Big Clyde Vollmer completes a pleasure trip around the bases after socking a homer in the fifth inning against the White Sox yesterday. Welcoming him is Eddie Yost, Nats third baseman. Vollmer didn't hit enough homers, and the Nats lost 6-4, after blowing a two-run lead after two men were out in the eighth inning

Paul Calvert Loses Game; Vollmer Hits Homer

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The Nats switched to Calvert late yesterday, and the hitherto well-behaved White Sox suddenly found themselves drunk with power. They whacked him for the two tying runs in the eighth inning, and then poured four more runs home in the ninth for a 6-4 victory.

Paul Calvert was the losing pitcher. He relieved Walter Masterson in the eighth with the bases loaded and was greeted by a two-run single by Gordon Goldsberry. In the ninth, the White Sox caved him after the first two hitters were out.

Until the last two innings, the Sox were a moderate lot and were being held to three mere hits by Walter Masterson, for whom the Nats had patiently assembled a 2-0 lead. And then Masterson ran into trouble after two were out. Floyd Baker singled as did Pinch-hitter Jerry Scala, and Masterson Walked Dave Philley to fill the bases.

He was excused at that point and Calvert moved in to be greeted by Goldsberry's game-tying single to center.

There was no immediate alarm for the Nats in the ninth, though Michaels walked with two out. But he stole second, and Calvert's control deserted him. He walked Tipton, and then Baker singled to right for a run. Pitcher Clyde Shoun singled to left for another run, and Calvert wild-pitched the third one home. Philley knocked in the fourth with a double to left.

The Nats themselves stirred up two runs in the ninth, in a feeble attempt to get back in the game. Kozar opened with a single and Vollmer scored him with a lengthy double to left. But Yost struck out, Robinson popped up. Dente picked up the torch with a single to left that scored Vollmer, but Evans closed the Nats out with a ground ball to Michaels.

It was a pitcher's game until Masterson's blow-up in the eighth. In fact, the White Sox didn't get a man past first base to that inning, and all they had to show for their hitting efforts was a single by Michaels in the third, another by Bowers in the fifth, and a third by Appling in the seventh.

Meanwhile the Nats had come up with a run against little Bill Pierce, White Sox left-hander, in the second inning. It came cheaply after he walked Yost and Robinson with none out. Dente's fly moved Yost to third, and he scored on Evans' fuzzy single that was blown out of the reach of the in-racing Dave Philley.

There was nothing wrong with the Nats' second run. Clyde Vollmer pumped his sixth homer of the year far, far, into the left center bleachers with two out and none on in the fifth. It would have been a homer in Tibet.

Young Pierce didn't survive the seventh, after walking three men in a row with two out, big Matt Surkont moved in, and was in a bad way, himself, after Dente worked him to a 3-0 count, but eventually he lured Dente into hitting back to the pitcher's box and the Nats got nothing out of the inning.

In short . . . summed up, the Nats were trapped by the weather man, who suddenly produced a sunlit afternoon, after the morning rains . . . a crowd of 9421 saw the game . . . Manager Joe Kuhel protested to the umpires when relief Pitcher Shoun appeared on the scene with his glove taped. They made him take off the white patch which might annoy the batters . . .

General Manager Frank Lane, in the East with the White Sox, attempted to talk trade with Clark Griffith, offering Outfielder Dave Philley for one of Griffith's pitchers, without results . . . the Nats and White Sox go at it again tonight.

Parnell's Hit in 12th Wins for Boston, 3-2

Boston, May 22 (AP).—Mel Parnell, Red Sox left-handed pitcher belted a sharp single into left field in the last of the twelfth today, scoring Al Zarilla from second base with the needed run for a 3-2 Boston victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Parnell, who also had batted in the first Boston run, thus maintained his record of never having been beaten by the Tigers.

And the stylish left-hander thus became the first American League pitcher to win six games. He has lost one and has pitched seven complete contests. Furthermore, he has hit safely in each of the seven.

A paid audience of 31,687 had seen the Sox boot a couple of scoring chances until the twelfth when Zarilla lined a single into right field after Bob Doerr had opened the inning by striking out.

Billy Goodman neatly sacrificed "Zeke" to second. Birdie Tebbets was walked purposely and then Parnell whacked the first pitch from Virgil Trucks for his game-winning safety.

The Tigers scored both their runs in the third inning when they tied together a walk, a single, an error and another single.

A combination of a force play sandwiched among three of the 11 walks issued by Trucks and Parnell's fly out, accounted for the Boston first run in the fourth. They tied the score in the fifth on doubles by Ted Williams and Doerr.

Joe Di Maggio Suits Up Tonight Against Browns

New York, May 22 (U.P.).—Joe DiMaggio will don a New York Yankee uniform tomorrow night for the first time since April 11—but only for the purpose of batting and fielding practice, club officials announced today.

DiMaggio will test his ailing heel prior to a night game with the St. Louis Browns. Yankee Manager Casey Stengel today gave no indication when the veteran outfielder will be ready for regular duty but pointed out the DiMaggio might be used in a pinch-hitting role if he's needed.

Joe Kirkwood Wins With 276

Philadelphia, May 22 (U.P.).—Joe Kirkwood, jr., who plays the part of Joe Palooka in the movies, proved a champion in his own right today when he came home with a course record of 276 to win the $15,000 Philadelphia Inquirer Open Golf Tournament.

Kirkwood almost followed his usual form of blowing up on the last nine holes. Posting a 74 card beside three rounds of 68, 66, 68, the muscular blond's 276 for the 72 holes was 4 better than the 280 record Henry Cooper set over the White Marsh Valley course 12 years ago. Kirkwood's total was 12 under the course par.

Stocky Johnny Palmer, defending champion from Badin, N. C., equalled the former record to take second place. Bobby Locke, Goodall Round Robbin winner of a week ago, was third with 281 and Fred Hass, jr., of New Orleans fourth with 282.

Kirkwood's rocky road today included such golfing items as a seven for a par three hole.

On the 175-yard twelfth hole Kirkwood hooked a five iron to the left of the green into heavy rough. A wedge put him over the green and out of bounds. His third shot hit a mound approaching the green. The fourth bounced off and went into the rough. The fifth stopped 7 feet from the pin but he needed two putts to go down.

Giants Lose, 3-2, Win 13-4

St. Louis, May 22 (AP).—Walker Cooper's two-run homer and Whitey Lockman's three-run double sparked the New York Giants to a 13-4 second-game triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals after Stan Musial handed the Redbirds a 3-2 victory with a home run while two were on base in the first game of a double-header today.

The 29,889 fans represented the largest crowd here this season.

Braves Beat Chicago, 7-2; Sain's 4th Win

Chicago, May 22 (AP).—The Boston Braves shelled Johnny Schmitz for five runs in the first three innings and coasted in behind Johnny Sain for a 7-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs before 15,113 here today. One of the runs off Sain was a homer by Cal McLish who succeeded Schmitz in the third.

That was the only earned tally off Sain as the other run tallied on the muff of a pop fly by Elbie Fletcher, who reported to the Braves today from Jersey City.

Sain scattered nine hits, three of them by Hank Edwards, for his fourth victory of the season.

The Braves scored twice in the first inning on

Newcombe Wins Opener For Bums

Cincinnati, May 22 (AP).—Ken Raffensberger, veteran Cincinnati southpaw, pitched his third one-hit game in two seasons today to shut out the Brooklyn Dodgers 2-0 and give the Reds an even break in the Crosley Field twin bill.

The Dodgers won the opener 3-0 behind Don Newcombe.

Newcombe, huge Negro right-hander, made his first major league pitching for Brooklyn in the opener and turned in a sparkling five-hitter.

Newcombe fanned three and walked none.

Raffy's great performance broke a string of 19 consecutive Brooklyn victories over Cincinnati at Crosley Field. The Reds had not beaten the Dodgers here since June 22, 1947, and, on that occasion, Ewell Blackwell went to the ninth inning before allowing a hit.

Today's game was a heart-breaker for Raffensberger. He went seven full innings without allowing a safety. Gil Hodges broke the spell as first up in the eighth, when he lined a clean single into left.

Sisler's Hit in 9th Beats Bucs, 6 to 5

Pittsburgh, May 22 (AP).—Dick Sisler came through with a ninth-inning pinch hit double today to score Jackie Mayo with the winning run as Philadelphia nosed out the Pittsburgh Pirates 6 to 5 before a crowd of 31,465. The second game of a scheduled double-header was called on account of wet grounds.

Robin Roberts, young Philly pitcher, gave up 13 hits as he notched his fourth victory of the year against three losses. He was lifted for a pinch hitter in the ninth and Jim Konstanty held the Pirates in check the last inning. Elmer Riddle was the loser.

Little Generals Seek $1000 To Go to National Regatta

For $1000, which must be collected before Thursday, a national championship can be brought to the Washington area.

The Potomac Boat Club is convinced of this. More important, the eight husky youngsters who row for the Washington-Lee High crew, of Arlington, practically guarantee it.

With the money Washington-Lee's oarsmen would pay expenses to the National Scholastic Regatta at Detroit this coming weekend. Just getting to Detroit is tantamount to winning the title, in the opinion of Little General boosters.

There's pretty good reasoning behind the opinion. Didn't Washington-Lee's crew, just organized in March, whip the undefeated and thrice-champion LaSalle outfit in Philadelphia last Saturday to win the Stotesbury Cup? Didn't it do the mile in 5:31, a respectable time for a collegiate crew?

The Potomac Boat Club has backed the Little Generals so far, but the $1000 needed for the Detroit trip is a little more than it has laying around. Civic and sports-minded Arlingtonians and Washingtonians have been called upon to help, since crew racing is not yet on the W.-L. budget.

Any part of the $1000 will be gratefully accepted by Fred Malentz, Potomac Boat Club member who coaches Washington-Lee along with Charlie Butt. Malentz lives at 1819 F st. nw., and can be reached by phone at EXecutive 2207.

Quantico Rifle Team Captures District Title

The Marine Corps rifle team No. 1, from Quantico, won the District Pistol and Revolver Championship yesterday, registering an aggregate total of 3384x3600. It was the second year in a row that the Leathernecks had won the title and they were presented with the Bernard Burnstine trophy.

Roy Marshall won the individual championship with an overall score of 1437x1500 and also took the .22-caliber crown with a 579x600.

Louise Brough Upset, Gonzales Wins at Paris

Paris, May 22 (AP). — Louise Brough, the United States' second ranking feminine player, was beaten, and Dick Gonzales, the American men's champion, narrowly escaped defeat today in fourth round matches of the French International Tennis Tournament.

Miss Brough of Beverly Hills, Calif., Wimbledon champion and finalist in the United States Title Tournament, was upset by Joan Curry, British Wightman Cup star, 4—6, 9—7, 6—2.

Gonzales, 21-year-old ace from Los Angeles, was carried to the limit by Torsten Johansson, Swedish Davis cupper, before pulling out with a 15—13, 6—4, 0—6, 4—6, 6—4 victory.

While Gonzales and blonde Louise were having their trouble, Frank Parker of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Margaret Osborne du Pont, Bellevue, Md., top-seeded in their respective divisions, advanced without difficulty.

Parker ousted Richardo Balbiers, Chile, 7—5, 6—2, 6—2.

Mrs. du Pont, United States women's champion, eliminated M. Nigliori, Italy, 6—2, 6—2.

DEAR FOLKS:

Both horses and autos here have profited by recent improvements. The thoroughbreds are reveling in on the resurfaced track and the cars are not getting stuck in the mud on the newly paved parking areas. Trainer Danny Scocca, Washington boy and former jockey, is the only conditioner who has to look up to give instructions while talking to his rider in the paddock. When Ace Star won the fourth race last Saturday so many people tried to get in the victory picture that there was no room for the horse. It was the biggest winner's circle gathering I've seen since the Cicero family assembled at Pimlico to be photographed after Gypster won some years back. —BILL.

Prince Georges Beats Washington 16½-1½, for Golf Title

Tulley Loses, 6-4

McMahon Wins in School Golf

Paul McMahon, Gonzaga High sophomore, defeated Bill Tulley of Gordon Junior High, 6 and 4, yesterday to win the second flight of The Washington Post schoolboy golf tournament, at Georgetown Prep.

McMahon had defeated Hugh McLoughlin of Blair, 3 and 1, to reach the finals, while Tulley was beating Jack Salter of De-Matha, 5 and 4.

Tulley started off well and was one up on the fourth, but he couldn't hold his advantage against McMahon, a first-flight player last year and one of the better junior golfers.

Both the winner and the runner-up will receive medals.

CHEVY CHASE — Jack Barr and Page Cornwall defeated W. B. Mason and Harry Pitt, 3 and 2, to win the championship in the top flight of the Chevy Chase Invitational. Barr and Cornwall downed the favorites, Ralph Bogart and Dr. H. L. Smith in the semifinals, 2 and 1; while Mason and Pitt won from Merle Thorpe and Bob McInerne, 1 up.

The second flight was won by John Brookes and L. J. Bernard, 4 and 3 over R. W. Wilcox and A. L. Sherrier. Third Flight was won by Ed Carusi and R. E. McCormick, who downed Frank Almirall and H. E. Radcliff, 4 and 3.

BELLE HAVEN — Weekend qualifyers in the Belle Haven Bowl which extends until Friday were led by Col. Ben Schriever, 39, 33—72. Trailing Colonel Schriever, were Eddie Edwards, 40, 36—76; Bert Gropp, 39, 38—77; Hank Ladley, 38, 40—78; Comm. H. G. Clark, 40, 38—78; Paul Lipps, 38, 41—79; and Joe Daniels, 41, 38—79.

Winners in a lucky hole tournament were N. B. McLean, Capt. W. H. Jewell, Col. K. H. Kalbren, M. B. Golbrenson, and Comm. R. W. Blouin.

BETHESDA — Don Scott scored the first ace ever recorded on the 200-yard ninth hole. He used a three wood to drive the green and saw his shot drop for the hole in one, his first. Witnesses were Phil Donaldson and Ed Williams.

Morris, Ondo And Rippey Shoot 71s

By West McLean
Post Reporter

Prince Georges Country Club trounced Washington Golf and Country Club, 16½—1½, yesterday at Columbia for the Maryland State Golf Association team championship.

Washington was never in contention losing all three points in five of the six matches and salvaging only a tie in the fifth match, where Bill McCabe and Chick Featherstone, of Washington, split with George Voight and Eddie Semmler.

Bob Morris and Mike Ondo, of Prince Georges and Claude Rippy of Washington all toured the long rolling course in one over par, 71s.

Washington had been given almost an equal chance after their surprising defeat of the three-time champions from Maryland Country Club last Sunday, but the Landover boys proved just too classy for them.

Al Houghton and Doug Mattison, Prince Georges, 3 points to 0 for Dave Thompson and William Walsh. Bob Morris and Gil Willett, Prince Georges, 3 points to 0 for Jim Gardner and Harold Hair. Mike Ondo and Jim Kinder, Prince Georges, 3 points to 0 for Claude Rippy and Sid Carroll. Mike Jankowski and Ed Bean, Prince Georges, 3 points to 0 for Ed Steptoe and Jiggs Webb. George Voight and Eddie Semmler, Prince Georges, 1½ points to 1½ points for Bill McCabe and Chick Featherstone. Jan Jankowski and Joe Balestri, Prince Georges, 3 points to 0 for Lew Swarthout and Billy Martin.

MANOR—K. F. Veley, T. H. Waggaman, J. E. Nell and W. A. Mattingly needed a 21-handicap to post a net best ball of 58 after a gross of 79 to gain a tie with Jack Crook, M. A. Shipley, C. E. McGowan and Nick Coppola who had a 71—13—58.

CONGRESSIONAL—G. K. Miller, defending champion, was not on hand to defend his Tatum Cup honors yesterday and J. R. Grear shot a 83—16—67 to come up as his successor. Col. J. S. Myers had a 77—9—68 for second and J. D. Kendall took third with a 93—14—69.

KENWOOD—Seven golfers tied for the top slot in a blind bogey, all with 70's. The 90 players were led by A. M. Nolan, A. C. Butler, J. E. McElvain, R. E. Read, J. D. Richardson, M. H. Long, and R H. Fuchs.

WOODMONT—Dr. Sam Bogdonoff and Leon Sherman had a 33-handicap to go with their gross 180 for a 147 net to tie with Sam Schwartz and H. J. Fox's, 172—25—147. Next were Mel Lewis and Sid Margolis, 177—29—148 and Dr. E. Aaronson and Isadore Alk, 188—38—150.

Tech Hopes History Repeats The Old Bill Werber Story

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

McKinley Tech High School is hoping that the old "Bill Werber touch" holds up this week when the Trainers bid for the Interhigh baseball championship.

Forty years ago there was a Bill Werber playing third base at Business High. He was the star of the team, and Business won the Interhigh title.

In 1923, another Bill Werber, son of the Business star, was playing third base for McKinley Tech. He was the leading hitter of the team and carrried it to an Interhigh crown.

This year's Tech team meets Western Tuesday in the championship playoff opener, and once more, the Trainers have a Bill Werber on their side.

Today's Werber is a son of the second Werber and grandson the first, and he's been hitting in the old family tradition.

In fact, in the nine league games, young Bill collected 12 hits in 27 trips to the plate, including three homers, for a .444 average.

Unlike his forbear, the 18-year-old is a left-handed first baseman, taller and lankier, and he has more power. Lots of old timers rate him a better prospect than his dad was at Tech. And his dad, you know, was some shucks as an infielder for the Yankees, Red Sox, A.'s and Reds.

However, it was only a year ago when his dad had just about given up on the youngster as a baseball prospect. Billy's best sport seemed to be football, where he tossed a smart left-handed pass.

Determined to show that he did have the stuff in baseball, Billy didn't report for football last fall, so he could conserve his energy. That neat bit of strategy seems to have paid off, for Bill's certainly blossoming this spring.

The major league scouts have flocked to see him play, but they'll have the second call on him. Proud papa Bill Werber has ticketed his sonny boy to Duke University, his own alma mater, and is hoping that his son will follow his footsteps to the big leagues.

Local 82 Wins, Takes 1st Place

The Local 82 All-Stars took over first place in the D. C. Recreation League by trouncing Census, 19-5, yesterday at Banneker. Dusty Prue and Alvin Scott both got homers and triples for the winners. The All-Stars have won two and lost none.

In another league game, the D. C. Clowns romped over the Coriscans, 12-5 at Banneker. Bud Billard hurled a two-hitter for the victors.

Fort Belvoir Forfeits

In one of the few candlot games played yesterday, Groveton won by forfeit over Fort Belvoir in a Fairfax County Junior League game at Groveton. Groveton was declared the winner when Belvoir's Bob Harding was ejected from the game and Belvoir refused to substitute a man for him. Umpire Payne then awarded the game to Groveton.

All games in the City Unlimited League, the Upper Montgomery County League, the Montgomery County League, and all Prince Georges County leagues were rained out.

13 Yanks Play Today in British Golf

Postmarnock, Ireland, May 22 (AP).—Willie Turnesa, the United States amateur titleholder, has been installed the choice to regain the British Amateur golf crown in the championship match play tournament starting tomorrow.

One prominent bookmaker in nearby Dublin laid 5-1 against Turnesa regaining the title he won in 1947. You could have 6-1 against Frank Stranahan, the defending champion from Toledo, Ohio, and Ronnie White, the English champion.

Turnesa tees off at 4:06 a. m. (EST) in the first round against the unknown English player, A. Turner.

There are 71 other opening-round matches scheduled.

Thirteen of the 19 American entries will play, while the others got byes into the second round. Both Stranahan and his father, Robert, have tomorrow off.

Lenczyk Favorite

Harlech, Wales, May 22 (AP).—Grace Lenczyk, the rhythmic swinger from Newington, Conn., goes after her international "grand slam" of golf titles tomorrow in the British women's amateur tournament.

The Connecticut star, already holder of the United States and Canadian crowns, rules a joint favorite with Miss Jean Donald of Scotland, who was runner-up last year.

Loss of Leg No Handicap to Harness Driver

Two legs aren't always necessary to make a great harness driver as the case of Edward (Peg Leg) Jones of Oswego, N. Y., has proven.

Jones, in his early 50's, a diminutive reinsman, who lost his left leg in a gun accident when he was 12, is one of the latest to check in at the new Rosecroft Raceway which opens for 20 nights Thursday at Oxon Hill, Md.

The New Yorker, despite his handicap, was the leading dash driver in 1945 with 148 vicktories, and horsemen at Rosecroft claim he has driven more heat winners than any man in the sulky sport.

Sarazen After 4th PGA Title

RICHMOND, VA., May 22 (AP). Wednesday will mean more than just the beginning of another PGA classic for Gene Sarazen.

For Wednesday, the sassy squire from Germanton, N. Y., tees off in what he says will be his final fling in a len_thy list of PGA tournaments. Sarazen has won the crown on three occasions. He'd like to be PGA king just one more time.

Officials of the Hermitage Country Club, where the thirty-first PGA opens May 25 and ends May 31, think Sarazen has a pretty good chance.

A lot of PGA memories undoubtedly will be recalled by golf's grand old man as he fires away again at one of the game's most lucrative championships.

There was 1922. The place was Oakmont, Pa. It was there that Gene annexed his first PGA title. Sarazen, a scrawny fellow of 20, beat Emmet French.

The following year, Sarazen whipped Walter Hagen, 1 up, on the thirty-eighth hole at Pelham, N. Y. There was never a longer PGA finals match although twice since there have been two similar struggles.

GENE'S VICTORY over Hagen was likely one of the PGA's most dramatic contests. He crossed a dangerous elbow of the green for a birdie that won the match.

Sarazen's marathon triumph over Hagen was duplicated in 1934 at Buffalo, N. Y., where Paul Runyan downed Craig Wood and again in 1941 at Denver, Colo., where Viv Ghezzi bested Byron Nelson. Ghezzi was three down with nine holes to go and finally won out.

Since he played in his first PGA tourney nearly 30 years ago, Sarazen has missed only one. Although he qualified, he did not go to St. Paul in 1932 because his assistant, Charlie Lacey, had qualified ahead of him and wanted to play.

YOUR ONLY CHANCE of Getting Ahead

Permission is freely extended to companies, associations, or individuals to quote from or reprint all or parts of these editorial messages, with or without credit mention.

This is the 76th of a series.

Where is the "brave new world" so glowingly promised us by the politicians during and after the war? We were told then that postwar America would live 50% better than it had before. Why has that promise faded out? Why are men today discouraged and frustrated?

We have not yet made good 1944's promises because the American worker turns out no more in an hour now than he did in 1941. We are getting more total production in our country—but only because we have more people working. Not because each one of us is producing more. American industry's ability to turn out more and more goods—with less of each worker's time and effort—has been stymied for eight long years.

Progress has been blocked because in some cases workers have not been willing to work as hard as they did before the war. In other cases unions restrict the use of labor-saving machines and methods. In some places obsolete building codes and ordinances prevent advances. In still other cases progress has been blocked by collusive practices between unions and manufacturers or operators.

But the biggest block to progress is the fact that our industry in the United States has been unable to provide our workers with all the new tools and equipment that they need.

Increasing productivity—that is each one of us turning out more in each hour of work—is the key to higher living standards. And productivity depends directly on the kind of tools workers use. His tools, more than anything else, determine how much a worker can turn out; and what his paycheck will buy depends in large part on what he turns out—not on how long or how hard he works.

Look what happened in our country in the forty years from 1900 to 1940. Productivity of the United States more than doubled. It doubled because:

Business investment in capital equipment gave workers new tools—tools that had three and one-half times as much power—

So—Americans' living standard rose almost 50% while the average work week was dropping from 61 to 43 hours.

Industry did continue to raise its output per man hour, even in the depressed 1930's. But it did it because, with unemployment widespread, companies used only their most efficient equipment. Actually the great depression saw industry fall far behind in the job of providing workers with new tools.

Then came World War II. Few new tools for peacetime industry were produced. As a result of depression and war, the U.S. fell behind in needed investment in new industrial facilities by more than $100 billion.

Since the war business has spent almost $60 billion for new plants and equipment—

But the greater part of that money went to expand production to take care of the needs of our bigger population, and to replace plants and equipment that were worn out and ready to be junked at the end of the war.

Only a small fraction of the $60 billion went to modernize equipment—the equipment that increases efficiency and improves productivity of the individual worker.

Right now industry is desperately trying to do the job of increasing efficiency of machines so that each worker can turn out more.

McGraw-Hill's national survey of Business' Needs for New Plants and Equipment shows that manufacturers plan right now to spend in the 5 years ahead three-quarters of their capital funds to replace and modernize facilities. The biggest part of the more than $55 billion industry plans to spend on its plants and equipment will go directly to improve efficiency of the individual.

If industry can carry through its plans—and expand them as it would like to and as it must do—the U.S. can catch up on its depression-war-time lag in progress within a few short years.

If American industry is allowed to earn the money to buy the equipment, it can raise the American standard of living 50% in our generation—in the next 25 years. No other nation can promise its people that much—and deliver on the promise.

But the promise can only be fulfilled by American industry. Wherever you turn, industry has dramatic new ways of doing things. Using oxygen by the ton, steel makers are increasing production from blast furnaces by 20%. New high-speed machine tools are doing three times the work of 1940 tools. A new coal-mining machine will multiply a miner's daily output 10 times. Diesel locomotives do the work of three steam locomotives on many jobs.

New products—and larger production of standard products—are already making their impact on American life. Two million Americans will get new television sets this year. Automatic washing machines, electric dishwashers, and home freezers are easing the daily tasks of thousands of housewives. Millions of homes that did not have them before the war now have telephones, automatic heat and refrigerators. Frozen foods, nylon clothing—these and many other things coming along now—will shape the real new world for Americans.

But industry can provide them only if it can keep on in investing at least $15 billion a year now—and more in future years—in new plants and equipment.

Today Washington is taking a course which, if pursued, will make that investment by industry impossible. Government spending now strains our resources to the limit, and more multi-billion dollar spending proposals are being piled on. But government spending cannot improve American living standards. It never has, and it never will. Increasing government spending now will only block progress, because the government proposes to pay for its plans by taxing away the profits industry is using, and must continue to use, to improve and expand its plants and equipment—our only hope for greater worker productivity and higher living standards.

Better living can only be paid for with more production. And we can only get more production by increasing productivity—by each one of us producing more for each hour of work.

The first thing is to get the production—in peace and in war—for better living—for security. Industry is planning to provide it—and is using $13 billion of its profits this year to improve and expand its facilities.

The only sensible, the only safe national policy is to make it possible for American industry to do its job—not to terrorize private industry with proposals of ruinous taxation and paralyzing controls and threats of nationalization. For American industry is not a thing apart from the American people any more than is government. American industry is the lifeblood of the American people and whatever makes industry do its work better contributes more to the common welfare than a bureaucratic government can ever hope to do.

New Positions Hinge On Social Security And Health Programs

Creation of thousands of additional Federal jobs by this session of Congress waits on enactment of two basic points in the President's "fair deal" program, which are: (1) an expansion of Social Security, and (2) the health program. The hope that they will eventuate is far from bright.

The Budget Bureau has made the following estimates of new workers it would take to operate these points:

Between 15,000 and 20,000 employes are indicated for the Federal Security Agency and the Internal Revenue Bureau to administer the enlarged Social Security program. Revenue estimates I would need from 5500 to 6800 new people to collect and to account for new Social Security and health taxes. The remainder of the proposed increase would be in FSA'S Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance to handle the broader Social Security program.

Between 35,000 and 45,000 new workers would be needed eventually to operate the proposed health program. Of that number, about 5000 would be at health headquarters here. The remainder would be Federal-State employes, to run the program at the State level.

STORY: A Pentagon nurse was asked about her working hours. She smiled as she answered:

"My official working hours are from 8:30 to 5, but I stay on the job until 5:30 every evening to bandage and treat those employes who get bruised trying to catch the 5:05 buses."

GUN FACTORY: It let off 57 laborers over the weekend. About 130 more may get the ax soon. The laborers are being fired at the direction of Civil Service because they do not have regular status. Their discharges have no bearing on the prospective big layoff at Washington's largest industrial establishment.

By early fall the naval establishment will have to wipe out upwards of 2500 of its 10,500 jobs—unless it gets additional work contracts in the meantime. Officials of the factory are doing their best to get more work assigned to it—and they have already met with some degree of success. It's clearly possible that the layoff may not be as large as it was once feared.

Meantime, Gun Factory employes are pushing the enactment of legislation which would require the Navy to do at least half of its work on ship construction, maintenance, and repair.

HEARING EXAMINERS: The issue over them is getting hot, and it will get hotter before it cools off:

It all started when an outside board of Civil Service consultants ruled as unqualified a large group of hearing examiners who had held their Federal jobs to the satisfaction of their agencies for years. The reexam was required in the Administrative Practices Act.

Indirectly, the Civil Service group has admitted it was in error in 10 of the 12 cases of Interstate Commerce examiners who were declared to be unqualified. It has passed the buck to the Civil Service Commission, which is now free to make decisions in the cases. The consultants took the cases of the remaining two under advisement.

But the consultants didn't act until the association of ICC practitioners demanded an inquiry by Congress in a sizzling letter which said in part:

"Not only does the action complained of do violence to one's sense of justice and fair play, but the Civil Service's action is subversive of constitutional guarantees and democratic principles and ideals. The professional standing (in the sunset of life devoted to public service), social and professional reputation, and the very livelihood of each of these 12 men are destroyed without specific charges, without an opening hearing, and without the opportunity to know their accusers or the accusations, much less confront and cross-examine them . . ."

The letter goes on to charge that "present hysteria has unbalanced sane and considered procedures."

MEETING: The Federal Career Employes will meet tonight at 7:30 in the Interior auditorium.

Move to End Play Area Segregation Studied Here

Officials Planning Policy Statement As Administration Pressure Increases

"A "compromise" declaration pledging an eventual end to segregated play areas is under consideration by both the District Recreation Board and the District Commissioners.

The move is the result of increasing Administration pressure on local officials, the latest being a White House conference called by President Truman last week.

The "compromise" would take the form of a statement by the Recreation Board, an independent District agency. It perhaps would be subscribed to or be cosponsored by the Commissioners who name four of its seven members.

Many Problems Cited

The statement would point out that while the end of segregation, in line with the President's civil rights program, is the aim of local officials, many administrative problems must first be worked out. A specific date by which all segregation would be ended might, or might not, be included.

Assistant Secretary of the Interior C. Girard Davidson said yesterday such a "declaration of good faith" might be sufficient to end the battle between the recreation unit and his department. Interior then could map out a schedule to turn over all strictly local recreation areas, as Davidson publicly offered to do last week.

The White House conference on the segregation issue was attended by the three Commissioners, Davidson, and his boss, Interior Secretary J. A. Krug.

Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young yesterday said the meeting took place but he would not discuss what transpired, nor would he state his own position on the segregation issue.

The problem is directly in the Commissioners' colective laps, however, because their representative on the Recreation Board, Budget Director Walter Fowler, has formally asked for instructions. He will have to vote on whether or not to end all segregation in areas and activities under hte Recreation Board's control at the next board meeting, June 14, unless the "compromise" meanwhile is worked out to the satisfaction of all sides.

Closed Hearing Ordered

Commissioner John Russell Young may be questioned on his attitude when the Senate District Committee considers his renomination. A closed hearing has been ordered but no date set.

The Board of Education also is faced with the problem of instructing its delegate to the Recreation Board, Albert E. Steinem. The board failed to take action at its meeting last week, however, and Steinem was not present at a Recreation Board by-laws committee meeting seeking to work out some "compromise" solution.

Chairman Harry S. Wender of the recreation unit, said yesterday he talked to the two Commissioners Young last week about the "compromise" idea but did not know at the time they had been called before the President.

Vogt to Talk To Foresters On Thursday

William Vogt, chief of the conservation section of the Pan American Union, will discuss "Human-Forest Ecology in Latin America," before some 200 members of the Society of American Foresters at 8 p. m. on Thursday.

The society's meeting will be held in the home of Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, 1615 Rhode Island ave. nw., in the library where the professional foresters' group was first organized in 1900 by the late Gifford Pinchot, former Governor of Pennsylvania.

"Baked Apple Club"

The annual meeting at the Pinchot home is known as the "Baked Apple Club" because Mr. Pinchot served baked apples and gingerbread to the foresters from the first session until his death in 1946. Mrs. Pinchot has continued the tradition anually since then.

Problems and policies in highway safety will be discussed by Pyke Johnson, president of the Automotive Safety Foundation, at the May meeting of the American Society of Safety Engineers, scheduled for 6:30 p. m. Tuesday at the Officers Club, U. S. Naval Gun Factory.

Another scientific meeting this week will be that of the Washington Rubber Group, set for 8 p. m. on Tuesday. Loren Polhamus of the Bureau of Plant Industry, Soils and Agricultural Engineering, Department of Agriculture, will speak on natural rubber development in the Western Hemisphere.

Workshop to Graduate

"Graduation exercises" for students who have completed the National Capital Parks nature-leadership workshop will be at 8 p. m. Thursday in the Interior Department auditorium, C st. between 18th and 19th nw. A color movie "Wilderness Canoe Country," will be shown.

Tribute Paid To Pershing At Cathedral

Veterans and civic organizations paid tribute yesterday to the late Gen. John J. Pershing, commanding general of the American Expeditionary Force during World War I, at the twenty-second annual massing of colors in Washington Cathedral.

The ceremonies were to be held in the out-door amphitheater, but took place inside the cathedral because of the threat of showers. The service was sponsored jointly by the Military Order of the World Wars and the Washington Cathedral with 113 organizations participating.

Praised by Bishp Dun

The Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, emphasized that General Pershing was not only a great soldier, but "a faithful churchman and a devoted friend of the cathedral." He expressed the hope that before long there would be a memorial to the general at the cathedral.

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, past commander of the Military Order of the World Wars, called General Pershing, who died on July 15, 1948, "one of the great captains of all time."

Only in the United States could Pershing have risen to the position of leadership he held, said Paul H. Griffith, executive assistant to the Secretary of Defense, and past national commander of the American Legion.

Up to American People

He declared that it depends on the American people and their relation with themselves and the world whether the principle that all men are bound together in brotherhood is universally recognized.

Pointing out that the United States must engage in a world-wide struggle for men's minds and souls if this principle is to be accepted, he said that Americans must demonstrate that they are not grasping for power.

Though progress toward world peace may be slow when measured by the life of men, Griffith said, it is not slow when measured in the life of nations.

The Jaycees are scheduled also to discuss means of spurring action on a Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission plan for public swimming pools in Montgomery County.

Mass Is Said At Arlington For War Dead

Nearly a thousand persons yesterday huddled in the gray mist at Arlington Cemetery for the 11th annual memorial mass for the war dead sponsored by the Fourth Degree, Knights of Columbus, and the National Committee of Catholic Societies.

Following the mass, which was celebrated by the Most Rev. Lawrence J. Msgr. Sheehy Shehan, Auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore, representatives of 104 organizations placed wreaths on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. The wreaths were blessed by the Most Rev. William R. Arnold, former Army Chief of Chaplains.

The Right Rev. Maurice S. Sheehy, former Navy Chaplain who is now head of the Department of Religious Education at Catholic University, told the gathering that the war dead "are the betrayed unless you, the living, dedicate your lives, your hearts, not to war but to peace.

"Our country, brave and bold in war, must be brave and bold in pursuit of peace. For the soldier lying dead there is only one successs—peace on earth."

The living, he said, can redeem the world by giving fair play to all, regardless of race, creed or color, and by seeking the Kingdom of God and His justice.

The guard of honor was composed of representatives of the Fourth Degree, Knights of Columbus, American Legion, Catholic War Veterans, Catholic War Veterans Auxiliary, Jewish War Veterans, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled American Veterans, Irish War Veterans and St. John's College cadets.

Louis Potter to Give Last D. C. Organ Recital

Louis A. Potter, organist of Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church, will make his last public appearance here today at 8:30 p. m. at an organ recital in Calvary Methodist Church, 1459 Columbia rd., nw.

Potter, who has been conductor of the Washington Choral Society for 19 years, is leaving Washington to become organist and music director of Centenary Methodist Church, Winston-Salen, N. C. He also has served as professor of organ at American University.

D. C. Woman Is Killed in Truck Upset

A 34-year-old Washington woman died at Casualty Hospital yesterday morning of injuries she received five hours earlier when a truck in which she was riding overturned on the new Indian Head highway in Oxon Hill, Md.

She was Miss Augusta Spearman of 407 1st st. se., who was taken to the hospital by the Oxon Hill rescue squad shortly after 2 a. m. She was pronounced dead at 7 a. m.

An autopsy disclosed her right thigh had been almost severed in the accident and she had suffered a broken right wrist. Deputy Coroner Richard M. Rosenberg said death apparently was due to shock, which followed a severe loss of blood.

The truck was driven by Marvin H. Hatton of 422 Canal st. se., police said.

In District traffic accidents, Samuel Parker, 35, a research technician for the Naval Research Laboratory, of 4 Yardarm gr. sw., was pinned in his auto after it swerved from the road in the 4500 block of South Capitol st. and struck a tree and telephone pole about 12:30 a. m. Parker was removed from the car by members of Fire Rescue Squad One and admitted to Casualty Hospital, where he was reported in satisfactory condition, suffering chest injuries.

Mrs. Florence Hawley, 54, of 5530 Gallatin st., Hyattsville, Md., was admitted to Casualty Hospital in undetermined condition with head, neck and hip injuries.

Police said she was a passenger in a taxi, driven by her husband, John W. Hawley, 53, when it collided with an auto at 4th and F sts. nw., about 12:30 p. m.

A passenger in the auto, William Campbell, 28, of 1528 12th st. nw., suffered a possible fracture of the neck, bruises to his left leg and arm and a lacerated nose, but was reported in satisfactory condition at Casualty. The auto was driven by Warren Cook, 27, of 724 G st. ne., police said.

Graduates Told of Need To Face Facts

University of Maryland graduates last night were alerted by the Rev. Dr. Albert E. Day to what he termed "the need for a generation of realists who will face the facts."

Speaking at the annual baccalaureate service in the university's new gymnasium, Dr. Day, pastor of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Baltimore, told the graduates that problems of the world as a whole could be eased if more people would recognize "the facts, the folks and the values of life."

"Too often in this world today politicians, industrialists and economists are inclined to disregard the true facts in their efforts to solve their problems," Dr. Day declared. "These facts include the folks who actually are part of the fact and the everyday values of life."

Some leaders, Dr. Day said, have become too involved in today's mechanized processes to recognize old facts of significance in world history. He cited the rise of the Roman Empire which he said should have served as a warning to those who have aspired to world power in modern times.

Recognition of the "folks," Dr. Day explained, "is simply consideration of people as people."

Many of the problems of industry could be minimized, he contended, if those from opposite sides of the table realized they were dealing with human beings.

"And," he added, "if this be true of industry, by the same token it could apply to many of our international problems."

In his reference to recognition of values, Dr. Day said he spoke of such values as justice, freedom, nature and beauty.

"And to recognize these is to have an awareness of God," Dr. Day asserted. "For, He is the author of all values."

The service was attended by about 100 of the university's more than 1200 graduates nad 1000 of their friends and families.

Best Dressed Cowboy

At Annual Father-Son Night

The Washington Post

CONTEST—When the Brotherhood of the Washington Hebrew Congregation held its annual father-son banquet at the Shoreham Hotel last night, Tommy Brylawski, 4, won the best dressed cowboy contest. His prize was a baseball, glove and bat. Joe Kuhel (at left), an honor guest, sighted the equipment and immediately tried to sign Tommy up for the Washington Senators, which Kuhel manages. The proud father, Henry Brylawski (at right) of 2440 16th st. nw., new vice president of the Brotherhood, gives his consent

Slot Operator, Clergy Aligned To Bar Payoffs

Hyattsville Ministers Urge Parishioners To Vote Against Legal Machines

By Robert P. Jordan
Post Reporter

Prince Georges County clergymen, civic groups and a pinball-machine operator are aligned in a fight to defeat a referendum June 2, legalizing cash-payoff slot machines.

A bill passed at the recent session of the Maryland Legislature puts the question of legalizing cash-payoff machines to the county voters at the June 2 referendum.

During the General Assembly's consideration of the measure, little organized opposition was voiced. Since the bill was signed by Governor Lane, opposition has developed aimed at defeating the measure both at the polls and in the courts.

7000 Leaflets Sent Out

The ministers have also paid for and distributed 7000 leaflets calling on citizens to cast their ballots "against legalized gambling." Another 5000 will be distributed next Sunday.

Attacking the proposal from another angle, C. Walter Hendrix has filed suit asking the county courts to halt the referendum. Hendrix is principal stockholder in the General Amusement Co., a firm that has operated pinball machines in the county for 14 years. The county commissioners must answer the suit by Wednesday.

Hendrix's attorney, Walter L. Green, has told reporters he was not opposing the referendum on moral grounds but because he feels it discriminates against him.

The situation is one that finds Leroy Pumphrey of Largo, only county delegate to the Maryland Legislature who opposed passage of the law, predicting:

"Legalized slot machines will corrupt and disrupt the whole political setup in the county—because the slot machine people will take over the reins of county government."

Take Put At $200,000

"As long as the machines already are in place and being used (but not paying off), we feel the county should derive some revenue from them." He estimates the yearly take will be "about $200,000" from license fees.

Should the voters approve the slot machines, Hendrix's firm would be barred from further operations in the county. The slot machine law provides, among other things, that licenses shall be limited to voters and property owners who have been county residents at least two years. Hendrix lives in Silver Spring.

This provision, Hendrix's suit contends, is "arbitrary and discriminatory . . . and has no reference to the protection of the public."

The action, filed against the board of county commissioners, also charges that the law sets up no standard of good character for prospective licensees.

Crime Increase Predicted

The bill, if approved, would permit console-type machines paying cash or merchandise but would ban the "one-armed bandit"—the conventional side-lever machine.

The Hyattsville Ministerial Union, headed by the Rev. D. Hobart Evans, pastor of Hyattsville Presbyterian Church has cited the experience of other areas with legalized slot machines.

The group claims that with "organized gambling comes an increase in all other forms of crime and the cowing or corruption of police and prosecutors."

"Organized gambling," says the union, "is the recruiting force of the underworld . . . the foe of every legitimate business."

Marbles in Area

Lynchburg Hit by Hail of Baseball Size

Rain accompanied by thunder and lightning—and hail in some suburban areas—swept Greater Washington last night, while at Lynchburg, Va., hailstones as big as baseballs pelted the city.

The Lynchburg hail astonished old-time residents and an associate weather observer there told the Associated Press he had never seen "that kind of ice fall from the sky."

The pellets, some of which weighed as much as a half-pound, broke windows and drove pedestrians from the streets.

The Weather Bureau here said the intermittent storms were associated with the atmospheric disturbance that has caused tornadoes in the Midwest and is now moving through the eastern Great Lakes region.

In the immediate Washington area, V. A. Frank & Son, florists, reported at least 300 windows broken by hail at the firm's greenhouses at 10725 Georgia ave., Silver Spring.

An official of the firm said the hail ranged in size up to that of a golf ball. It was the first time hail had damaged the greenhouses in 10 years, he said.

Hail up to the size of mothballs also was reported at Kensington and at Wheaton.

Fallen power lines, causes by the storms, darkened a large number of homes in McLean and Falls Church, Va., last night, and caused a fire at a two-story brick home on East Broad st. in Falls Church, near the intersection of Lee Hwy. and Leesburg Pike.

An electric line blown down blocked traffic on Lee Hwy. near Fairfax dr. for a time.

About 7 p. m., lightning struck the home of Clyde C. Hill, 4414 Puller dr., Kensington, burning out light switches and fuses and loosening shingles on the roof. About 10 p. m., the home of E. J. Talbert, 511 Deerfield st., Silver Spring, also was struck.

There also were reported of sewers being backed up and gardens flooded in Northwest Washington.

Gift Profits Trim Church Debt $5000

The $40,000 church debt of National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle, nw., was at least $5000 smaller yesterday because of an extremely profitable investment of $625.

Earlier this year a Texas businessman, who wished to remain anonymous, gave Dr. J. Warren Hastings, pastor of the church, $625 in silver dollars. He asked that members invest the funds to raise money for the church.

Dr. Hastings distributed the dollars on March 27 and the profits have been pouring back into the church ever since. Yesterday, with about three-fourths of the task done, Dr. Hastings estimated that the church has received over $5000 from the original investment, a return of 10 for 1.

The debt elimination committee of the church, working with Dr. Hastings, directed the campaign. Dr. Hastings said that the present debt of the church is about $40,000 and that, with the investment and other activities, "practically all of the $40,000 is in sight." Members of National City would like to build a recreation and education building next to the church, but cannot do it until the present debt is paid off.

The church members invested their money in many different ways. Several women spent their dollar for the ingredients for cookies, then sold them. Others made stuffed animals, or aprons.

One member took pictures of Dr. Hastings and sold them to members of the church. Several women bought soap and took in washing. A woman member spent her silver dollar for shampoo and washed her hair at home, giving to the church the money she would ordinarily have pent for shampoos at the beauty parlor.

Another woman did special typing on her free weekends, using the dollar to pay for car fare and extra lunches. An author sold an article to a magaine and gave the fee to the church and another man sold a house and plans to give a portion of his profit to the church.

Five men spent their dollars for popcorn, which they bought wholesale, then packaged and sold at retail rates. Even the members of the church who were ill made things and sold them to friends.

Stab Victim Critical

Charlie Durham, 42, of 814 4th st. nw., yesterday was reported in serious condition at Casualty Hospital where he was admitted late Saturday night after he was stabbed in the chest and neck during a fight at his home. Police are looking for a crippled man, known as "Steve," and his wife in connection with the stabbing, they said.

State's Fire Drill Gets Too Realistic

When the State Department staged a fire drill yesterday, all the ingredients were there—13 pieces of fire equipment, reporters, photographers, rubbernecks—all except a fire.

Slightly embarrassed was Lieut. Ralph B. Cloud, in charge of the special police detail at the State building at 21st st. and Virginia ave. nw.

Cloud staged the drill as a surprise on his staff and according to the usual procedure, he said, he disconnected the building's alarm system from the line running to fire headquarters before setting it off.

Something went wrong, however, and before he knew it, he had a host of fire fighters adding a realistic touch to his dry run.

School Guard Assaulted

The guard, Odell Burton King, 2605 Monroe st. ne., was taken to Providence Hospital with cuts and bruises on his forehead.

The boy, admitted only a few days ago to the school, apparently assaulted the guard in an attempt to get away, officials said.

He now probably will be transferred to another training school, they said.

Low Bid at Andrews

Low bid for construction of 13 eight-unit apartment buildings for Andrews Air Force Base personnel has been submitted by John A. Johnson & Sons, Inc., of Washington, Col. William W. Jones, Andrews Base commanding officer, has announced.

The bid was $1,507,181.

Death Cancels Meeting

The annual meeting of All Hallows Guild scheduled for Wednesday has been canceled because of the death yesterday of Mrs. John Wallace Suter, wife of the dean of the Washington Cathedral. A business meeting will be held at a future date.

Msgr. Cooper Dies at 66 of Heart Attack

The Right Rev. Msgr. John Montgomery Cooper, 66, head of the department of anthropology at Catholic University, died yesterday. He was stricken with a heart attack in his room in Curley Hall on the campus and died about 5:25 a. m.

Mr. Cooper

Monsignor Cooper had been a member of the faculty at Catholic University for 40 years and was known nationally as an anthropologist and educator.

A native of Rockville, Md., the son of James J. and Emma Lillie Tolou Cooper, Monsignor Cooper was descended from James Cooper of Mayfield, Staffordshire, England, who settled at Darby, Pa., in 1684.

Msgr. Cooper had been associated with numerous scientific and educational organizations for years and was a prolific writer on anthropological and ethnological subjects.

Msgr. Cooper had served as president of the American Anthropological Association and of the Anthropological Society of Washington. He was a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and held membership in the Washington Academy of Science and the American Folklore Society. He was awarded the Mendel Medal in 1939 and in 1946 was made an honorary life member of the American Social Hygiene Association.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University, at an hour to be announced later.

Mrs. Watson Dies; Widow Of Senator

Mrs. James E. Watson, 83-year-old widow of the late Republican Senator from Indiana, died of a stroke last night in Garfield Hospital. She had been in the hospital since May 3.

Senator Watson, known as "Sunny Jim" throughout most of his 39-year congressional career, died in the same hospital last July. A self-styled "ultra-conservative," he was Senate Republican leader during the Hoover Administration and a power in Indiana politics.

She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Ernest Gross, 15 Newlands st., Chevy Chase, and three sons, Joseph C. Watson, 2229 Bancroft pl. nw.; of the Civil Aeronautics Board, Edwin G. Watson, a mining engineer, Kennedy Warren Apartments, and James E. Watson of Chicago.

Mrs. Dorothy L. Kades

Requiem mass will be said at Fort Myer Chapel Wednesday at 9 a. m. for Mrs. Dorothy Lawrence Kades, 42, who died last Friday at Emergency Hospital after a long illness. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

A native of Madison, Wis., and a graduate of the University of Visconsin, Mrs. Kades had lived here since 1933. She was the wife of Charles L. Kades, New York attorney, former deputy chief of the Government Section, General Headquarters, in Tokyo and one-time assistant general counsel for the State Department.

She and her husband made their home at the Dorchester House, 2480 16th st. nw.

Ann Todd Weds

London, May 22 (AP).—Screen Star Ann Todd, 29, and film producer David Lean, 40, were married here yesterday.

Stackhouse, Retired Navy Captain, Dies

Retired Navy Supply Corps Capt. George M. Stackhouse, 77, died at Bethesda Naval Hospital Saturday. He had been in the hospital for several weeks.

Capt. Stackhouse entered the Navy as a Pay Officer in 1899, the same year that he graduated from The Citadel. Physical disability forced his retirement in 1913 with the rank of lieutenant commander.

Capt. Stackhouse returned to school, received law degrees at Georgetown and Harvard and opened a practice in the District. He was restored to the active list in 1918 and subsequently served as supply officer at ship and Navy yards including the Washington Navy Yard.

He retired in 1937 and has since made his home in Arlington. At the time of his death, he lived at Lee Highway and N. Powhattan st. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Texie A. Young Stackhouse and a brother, Dr. Wade Stackhouse, Dillon, S. C.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. at the residence today. The funeral will be held Tuesday afternoon in Marion, S. C.

Native of Scotland

Mrs. Hurley, Nurse Here, Dies at 61

Mrs. John A. Hurley, 61, a nurse at Doctors Hospital since about 1940, died there Friday of cancer.

Aware of her illness for the past 18 months, she remained off duty until several weeks ago, caring for victims of the disease which caused her death.

Mrs. Hurley, the former Ellen Murray, was a native of Scotland. She moved to Niagara Falls, Ontario, as a girl, received her nurse's training at Monmouth, N. J., Memorial Hospital and went into the Army Nurse Corps after her graduation in 1917.

She moved to Washington in 1921, shortly after her marriage to John A. Hurley, now an engineer in the Merchant Marine.

She was a member of the Marlboro Post No. 115 of the American Legion and of the Graduate Nurses Association.

Besides her husband of 3828 S. Capitol st., she leaves three daughters: Mrs. Jean A. Wilhelm, 516 Maple rd., Morningside, Md.; Mrs. Catherine V. Meyers, 1201 61st st., Seat Pleasant, Md., and Mrs. Josephine H. Long, Suitland, Md.

Services will be at 10:30 a. m. today at Chambers Southeast Funeral Home, 517 11th st. se., with burial in Arlington National Cemetery.

MacLaren Rites to Be On Tuesday

Ronald MacLaren, 71, Washington home builder, died Saturday at his summer home at Cedarhurst, Md., on the Chesapeake Bay.

Mr. MacLaren was found dead in his bed by his wife when she went to call him for breakfast. The family had gone to the cottage to prepare it for the summer.

A onetime lumberjack, he moved to Washington during World War I and built many small homes in the growing city. He retired about 10 years ago.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Ella MacLaren, with whom he lived at 2702 Ontario rd. nw; a daughter, Mrs. Frank Sheehan, of 1673 Columbia rd. nw., and two sisters and two brothers in Arizona.

Services will be held Tuesday at 11 a. m. at his late residence. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Klaus Mann, Son of Famous Novelist, Dies

Stockholm, Sweden, May 22 (AP).—Klaus Mann, oldest son of the famous German novelist Thomas Mann, died Saturday at Cannes, France, of a heart attack. He was 42.

Mr. Mann

The parents, who are visiting in Stockholm, were informed of the death today.

Klaus, known as an author and lecturer, visited the United States in 1927 and 1939 and lost his German citizenship for his anti-Hitler activities.

He moved to America in 1936 and joined his family in Princeton, N. J., a year later. Klaus founded and edited in New York the cultural magazine "Decision."

Guy Watkins, Merchant of Rockville, Dies

A. Guy Watkins, 54, of 107 Jefferson st., Rockville, Md., operator of two Montgomery County electrical supply stores, died Saturday at Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, after a long illness. He had been in business in Rockville, Md., since 1921 and recently opened another store in Wheaton, Md., shopping center.

He served as a corporal in the Tank Corps in World War I and in 1921 opened a dairy supply business in Rockville. This enterprise gradually changed to the electrical supply business and about a year ago he built a new building to house his Rockville enterprises.

He is survived by his mother, who resides in Philadelphia; his wife, Mrs. Rachel Watkins, a son, Hanson Watkins, both of Rockville; three brothers, Otis Watkins, Rockville, Clay Watkins, Sandy Spring, Md., and William Watkins of Washington, and two sisters, Mrs. Gladys Kaller and Mrs. Dorothy Williams, philadelphia.

Noon Rites Set For Zweig, 'D St. Mayor'

Funeral services for Max Zweig, 59, of 4607 Connecticut ave nw., who died Saturday night as the result of a heart attack, will be held at noon today at the Danzansky funeral home, 3501 14th st. nw. Burial will be in Adas Israel Hebrew Congregation Cemetery.

Mr. Zweig, sometimes known as "the Mayor of D Street," operated a pawnbroker's exchange at 937 D st. nw. from 1914 until he retired in 1946.

A native of the Ukraine, he came to the United States in his youth and, after serving in the Army, settled here 40 years ago.

Besides his wife, Mrs. Bessie Zweig, he is survived by four sons, Melvin, Oscar, Samuel and Benzon Zweig, and six grandsons.

Dean Suter's Wife Dies; Rites Tuesday

Mrs. Margaret Sturgis Suter, 55, wife of the Very Rev. John Wallace Suter, dean of the Washington Catheral, died yesterday in George Washinton University Hospital. She had been ill since last Monday.

Mrs. Suter

A native of New Haven, Mrs. Suter came to Washington in 1944 when her husband was named Cathedral dean. He was formerly rector of the Church of the Epiphany in New York.

Mrs. Suter came from an old Boston family. She was the daughter of William Codman Sturgis and Carolyn Hall Sturgis and the granddaughter of Russell Sturgis. Her father was teaching at Yale University at the time of her birth.

She spent her childhood in Colorado Springs, Colo., and was educated at Oldfields School, Glencoe, Md. She married Dean Suter in 1913.

In addition to her husband, Mrs. Suter is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Margaret Rood of Washington, and two sons, Richard S. Suter, of Alexandria, and John W. Suter, jr., of Grosse Point, Mich., a brother, Alanson H. Sturges, of Milton, Conn., and five grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 2 p. m. at the Washington Cathedral. Interment will be private.

Pfitzner Dies, Noted German Composer

Vienna, May 22 (AP).—Hans Pfitzner, famous German composer, died at Salzburg today, a penniless ward of the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra. He was 80.

One of Europe's most prolific and versatile musical personalities, Pfitzner lost three homes in two world wars. He had been without funds since his bank accounts in Germany and foreign countries were blocked during and after World War II.

In Memoriam

MUSTOINE, DONALD J. In remembrance of my husband, DONALD J. MUSTOINE, who passed away one year ago today, May 23, 1948.

Beloved, thou hast brought me many flowers
Plucked in the garden, all the summer through,
And winter, and it seemed as if they grew
In this close room, nor missed the sun and showers.
So, in the like name of that love of ours,
Take back these thoughts which here unfolded too,
And which, on warm and cold days I withdrew,
From my heart's grounds . . . Indeed, those beds and bowers . . .
Be overgrown with bitter weeds and rue.
And wait thy weeding; yet, here's eglantine,
Here's ivy . . . take them, as I used to do,
Thy flowers, and keep them where they shall not pine . . .
Instruct thine eyes to keep their colors true,
And tell thy soul their roots are left in mine.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Mother Sympathetically Accepted Her Son's Sweetheart, Despite Unsavory Gossip Aimed At Girl, But New Developments Cause Worry

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Last summer my son Dean started going with Jane, whom he met through school chums. Neighbors of ours, seeing Dean with her, were surprised we didn't know her reputation.

One pair of parents—the father a doctor—forbade their son her company and he was quite broken up about it. Another neighbor boy stopped dating her because she was too free with her embraces, he said; but he is a braggart and I'm not sure who turned down who.

Dean explained to me that Jane was a victim of gossip, due to her sister's having had an illegitimate child and, later, a husband who left her. We accepted Jane sympathetically, Dean enjoyed her jolly company, they have musical talents in common, and recently he gave her his fraternity pin.

Girl's Ostracized by Her Schoolmates

WE AGREED to announce their engagement in July, when Dean will be 20, and he happily agreed to finish college before getting married. But during the Christmas season he kept very late hours; and when we taxed him about this he told us he and Jane had spent the time in our closed-up summer camp, so they could be alone to talk. He said they wouldn't do it again.

During the Easter season Jane had an abdominal operation, and at the hospital I met her parents, charming people. The father praised my son, then added that he hadn't had much luck with his daughters, who were "terribly spoiled."

Jane, after discussing her surgical experience, told me that she hates going back to boarding school, for she heard her classmates discussing her morals behind her back, and her two roommates moved out, refusing to share a room with her. Her school is far distant from her home, so her sister's reputation can't have reached there. Now for the first time I am worried about her character. Should I announce the engagement as promised; or withdraw my consent to it? E. S.

Sound Views Are Flexible

DEAR E. S.: In adolescent boy-girl relationships, the loyalty pledge implicit in giving a fraternity pin isn't considered irrevocably binding. According to the younger set's unwritten rules of dating, it is a tentative option only, an experimental prelude to getting engaged, maybe.

Any passing storm of anger, misunderstanding or jealousy may provoke the girl to return the pin, or cause the boy to ask for it, and in such case, that's supposed to cancel the option; neither is supposed to have any further "claim" on the other.

Therefore, I feel that your erstwhile indorsement of Dean's fancy for Jane should be held as tentative as their state of mind—which may change any day—as they rehearse the idea of being engaged. Further, it seems to me you are entitled to abide by the dictates of common sense in dealing with Jane (or anyone else); and common sense implies the intelligence to change one's views or revise a course of action in the light of new learning.

No Merit in Blind Fixity

THUS I should say your trustful, offhand agreement some months ago to sponsor an engagement between Dean and Jane isn't ethically binding on you today or tomorrow, or in July, if in the meantime you've lost confidence in Jane's character.

Rather I should think it responsible and mature to speak plainly to both, together, about the misgivings which give you pause, and put it up to them to revive your confidence or face the fact that they've forfeited the sponsorship you had meant to supply. It is greatly to your credit that you accepted Jane with open mind to start; but you should not cling to a pose of blind gullible "faith" if you now sense that she is unsavory. M. H.

MANY worlds in miniature are glimpsed when you look into the tiny rooms in Mrs. James Ward Thorne's collection, which goes on display today at 1712 H st. nw. for the benefit of the American Hospital at devastated St. Lo, France. One world is that of Louis XVI, who reigned in France when the original of the salon above was built and furnished. Mrs. Thorne has copied it with great authenticity and attention to detail so that, in a space 29 by 19 inches square, are seen exact miniatures of furniture, tapestry, paneling, candlesticks, and many other small objects. American Aid to France, Inc., sponsors the showing of 30 miniature rooms, lent for this purpose by Thomas J. Watson, president of International Business Machines

Beware the Shiny, Green Leaves When You Gather May Flowers

By Ida Jean Kain

WHEN you go gathering flowers in May, beware of poison ivy. As I've warned, this three-leaf beauty is a lot easier to come upon than a four-leaf clover. And I am in a position to know.

In fact, I'm an authority on the subject and can state, without fear of contradiction, that there is no closed season on this plant that bites like a spider—it is just as poisonous in spring as it is in midsummer, and itches just as bad, if not worse.

Wait, don't stop reading—this may save you a pretty penny, not to mention weeks of agony.

I know for sure that the poison is in the roots, the stems, the leaves and the flowers. And the disguises that plant takes! In early spring it is a cluster of tiny leaves, soft red in color, very innocent looking. By now it has turned green. Later it may be a small, low shrub, or a vine climbing merrily over bush, hedge, stone wall and up trees—which is where I unsuspectingly met it.

And don't count on spotting it by the traditional tiny, notched, bright green leaflets. The three leaves may be big, smooth-edged and dark green. In the fall this three-leafed villain turns a beautiful orange and later a brilliant red—many people use it in bouquets, much to their regret. And in winter look out for bare stalks topped by clusters of yellowish white berries.

Some people boast that they have a natural immunity to the shrub. Don't risk it. It can even be picked up second-hand from contaminated articles—gloves, shoelaces or garden tools that have been in contact with the plant months previous.

Everybody is eager to pass along his pet cure. Some experts claim that washing with good brown soap soon after exposure will neutralize the causative agent and prevent inflammation. Don't rely on it! Out of the 700 or so "cures" for poison ivy that have been reported, none has given completely satisfactory results.

United States Public Health Service researchers are seeking an eventual preventive and cure for the poison, but in the meantime the only real preventive is to learn to recognize it in ALL its forms—and its relatives, too: poison oak, with its three roundish leaflets, and poison sumac which has very large leaves, from 6 to 15 inches long. They are all deceptively pretty. Until you know the difference for sure, suspect every three-leaf plant you see.

If you have never experienced a beautiful case of poison ivy or oak, you don't know what you're missing . . . and may you never find out!

Gridiron Club Entertains Distinguished Guests

By Marie McNair

MEN that make news were guests of those that write it yesterday at a cocktail party at the Statler Hotel.

Hosts were Richard Wilson, new president of the Gridiron Club, and Mrs. Wilson, and stars of the occasion were the famous Gridiron Club entertainers who put on a part of the musical program which they'd given the night before at the club's annual spring dinner.

Only the tragic death of James Forrestal, his former Secretary of Defense, kept President Truman away from the party to which he usually brings Mrs. Truman and Margaret when she's in town.

Before the stage of the Presidential Room waslighte d up for the show, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson had met their guests in the Congressional Room adjoining, where a long buffet table and two bars had been set up.

With the Wilsons were Mr. and Mrs. Tom Stokes, Mrs. Wilson in a black taffeta frock with turned up hat to match and white orchids on her shoulder; and Mrs. Stokes wearing persimon color crepe with a black hat.

Clays to Leave

First persons I was to meet were Gen. Lucius Clay, and Mrs. Clay, who's charming and pretty, and was wearing yesterday a bolero frock in natural color wool, a tiny rolled brim baku hat of the same color with matching roses and a drift of brown veil. Mrs. Clay told me they'll be here only until June 1 when they leave for Cape Cod for the summer, "and after that we have no plans."

Paul Hoffman, ECA Administrator, and Cyrus Ching, who heads the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, were having a chat and nearby Mrs. Ching was greeting friends.

Saw Senator Eugene Milkin—not Mrs. Millikin; Senator Homer Ferguson and Mrs. Ferguson, and Justice and Mrs. Harold Burton who never miss the show.

Charles Ross, secretary to President Truman, was representing the White House, and Mrs. Clark Clifford, whose husband is President Truman's Special Counsel, was there with Mr. and Mrs. Jay Hayden. Representative and Mrs. Mike Monroney—Mrs. Monroney trim in navy blue—were among those lamenting Mr. Forrestal's death, which was a subject of conversation at one time or another in every group.

Col. Biddle There

Chuckling over the Gridiron Club's witticisms were Justice and Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark; Mrs. Clark, the former Violet Heming, wearing a filmy black lace frock over pale pink, and a snug black hat with daisies about the rim.

Col. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, and Mrs. Biddle in light blue linen and toast color wide brimmed hat, found places after a late arrival in the back of the room, and others there were Robert Fleming, and Mrs. Fleming, whose gay red hat stood out like a beacon; Mrs. George E. Allen and Mrs. Lyle Wilson who came together, to be joined later by Mr. Allen; Mrs. Edward Treglown, just back from Nassau; and Mrs. George Mesta, who was talking to Edgar Morris and Roy Roberts.

Mr. Roberts was with Mr. and Mrs. Duke Shoop, whose other guests from out of town were Arthur Wahlstedt Watson Greene and Robert Weil of New York.

Leslie Biffle was there and Mrs. Biffle with him, wearing a becoming hat of hyacinth blue straw with a cascade of purple lilacs and a fascinating lapel pin of crystal beads in a fern-like design.

Saw Gen. and Mrs. Hobart Gay, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Farrington, Mannix Walker and his mother, Mrs. Ernest Walker; said "hello" to Mr. and Mrs. Francis Thomas, and Mrs. Walter Louchheim, and glimpsed Maj. David S. Barry, Edward Weintal, and Mrs. Joseph Kennedy, in a print frock, with her daughter, Patricia—or was it Eunice?

And oh yes, Mrs Robert Olds surrounded by admirers; humorist Charles Campbell of the British Information Service.

Dick Wilson, installed as president at the club dinner Saturday night, made an opening speech, paying tribute to Major William F. Santelmann, Gridiron Club music director, who led his Marine Band Orchestra through the program again; to Theodore Roosevelt Shoop—better known as Duke for his services as dramatic coach and to Marshall Mcneil, music chairman and then turned the program over to "the oldest living Gridironer—Walker Buel."

Other Fetes Yesterday

From this party some of the guests went on to Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim's Firenze House, on Broad Branch rd.; others to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Davies' estate, Tregaron and to Mrs. Randolph Huntington Miner's tea for her nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. Sayre MacNeil.

At Firenze House, Polly Guggenheim stood in the long drawing room in a wisteria crepe frock made with short skirt and a deep square neckline. In the dining room taking turns at the tea and coffee services were Mme. LeGallais, wife of the Luxembourg Minister; Mrs. Homer Ferguson, Mrs. Virgil Peterson, Mrs. Conger Pratt, Mrs. Edgar Prochnik, Mrs. Mitchell Palmer, Mrs. William P. MacCracken, Mrs. Phillips Clarke, Mrs. William T. Mann and Mrs. Peter Ansberry.

Colonel and Mrs. Guggenheim will leave July 3 for a South American trip, returning to Washington early in September.

Kimberlys Entertain At Annual Fete

MR. AND MRS. HARRY STANDISH KIMBERLY entertained at their annual spring cocktail party yesterday at their home on 30th pl.

Among those who dropped in between 5 and 7 p. m. were Admiral and Mrs. Louis E. Denfeld, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Thomas L. Sprague, Col. and Mrs. Bonner Fellers, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Albert Cox, Col. and Mrs. Clyde Finter, Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. Barnam Colton and Mr. and Mrs. Chad Calhoun.

Merrick Group to Meet

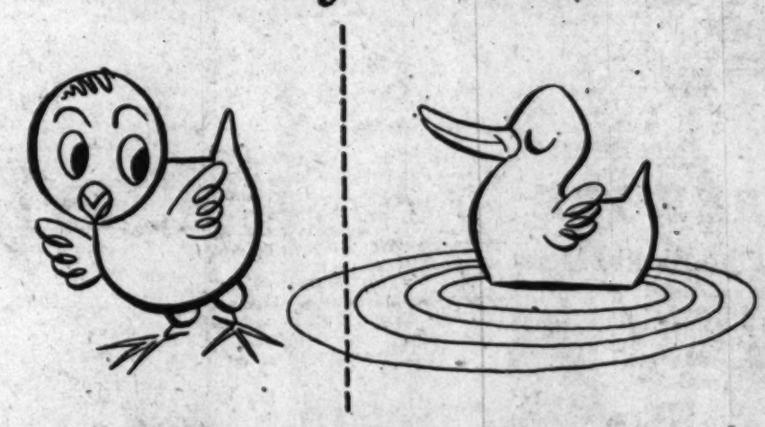
naturally different



Yes, a chick and a duckling have something in common. Both hatched from eggs. But they don't behave alike. For instance, they don't take to water the same way.

And that's how it is with the two textile fibers now sold to you as "rayon." They differ in ease of washing, speed of drying, resistance to soiling, ability to stay in press, and almost every other quality of importance to you as a consumer.

Urge your retailer to call these two fibers by different names—to identify one as rayon, the other as estron—as recommended by the American Society for Testing Materials.

To receive a free picture book that shows you in actual photographs the great differences between these two man-made fibers, just pencil your name and address on this ad and return it to us.

Advice for Planning West Coast Vacation

We are planning a trip (in two cars) to the West Coast this summer and expect to be traveling for a month. There will be six adults and a child of 6. Could you advise as to what kind of clothing, etc. would be best to take for this trip? R. S.

It seems to me that for the women, the most ideal clothes for the time spent in the car would be dark print seersucker sun-back dresses with boleros or jackets. Wearing these, you can ride in the heat of the day with the boleros off and then when you wish to stop to eat or it gets cooler, you can put them on. Seersucker will not show travel wrinkles readily and could be washed out at night and worn again without ironing.

In selecting your clothes, choose as many of nylon as possible. This is particularly true of undergarments. You will need much fewer garments of nylon because they wash so easily, dry quickly and can be worn without ironing.

Scarfs to bind your hair against the breezes and sun glasses for all will add much to the comfort of your trip.

In this connection, be sure to take along padded wooden hangers to hang the dresses on to dry.

In addition to these dresses, you should each have a light sweater handy for early morning and evening wear in the car.

The menfolks could wear seersucker slacks and cotton tee shirts or sport type shirts for traveling with a light suit coat handy for wearing while dining in air conditioned restaurants.

What other clothes you take will be determined by where you plan to spend the nights. If you plan to stop at hotels, you should pack several cotton or rayon dresses suitable for wear in the evenings to dinner in the hotel. Men would wear rayon slacks, a matching coat and sport or business type shirts. Cotton dresses for a girl or wash slacks and colorful tee shirts for a boy would be ideal for the 6-year-old in the evenings.

Is there any sort of treated paper, dark green or the blue now used in window glass that can be pasted on the inside of a window pane to repel the glare? Our apartment windows have the metal white venetian blinds, no shades are permitted and the glare from treeless surroundings is almost unbearable. I find it inconvenient to wear sun glasses while working in my rooms. The idea of paper occurred to me, but there may be a paint for such purposes. (I do not want to paint the venetian blinds) The windows can be rid of their temporary accessory when I move. O.M.T.

I know of no paper which is available for this purpose, but you can achieve the same effect by laying a sheet of blue or green tissue paper over the window pane and brushing over it with spar varnish. Cut the paper to exactly fit the glass and thin the varnish with one fourth as much turpentine before applying. In order that the varnish will go through the tissue and stick it firmly to the glass, wipe the glass with turpentine or alcohol to remove traces of grease before placing the paper on it.

The paper can be removed by scraping off with a razor blade and then sponging the remaining loose particles off with a cloth wet in turpentine.

There is a paint on the market for frosting glass, but it comes only in white. It can be purchased at all well-stocked paint stores.

Could sour milk be used in a recipe calling for one cup lukewarm thick buttermilk? This recipe also uses yeast. W. E. F.

If you have made this recipe with buttermilk which you know was sour buttermilk, you can substitute sour milk for it. Such a recipe will usually call for soda in addition to the yeast. If, however, no soda is called for in the recipe, a safer substitution would be sweet milk, for to get an acceptable product with sour milk, some soda is usually indicated to neutralize the acid in the milk.

While in China, my husband had a Chinese artist paint a portrait in oils from a miniature photograph. While it is a good likeness, the colors are too bright, the flesh tint too orange. I wonder if I could darken this 2-by-11½-foot portrait by painting it with varnish? What do you suggest? It has my artistic value. E. B.

You can darken the portrait by going over it with a high grade varnish to which burnt umber has been added. To determine how much burnt umber to add, add some and try it in a small spot in one corner first. This is also a good idea so that you can test the effect of the varnish on the oil used in the portrait. If the varnish softens or in any way affects the portrait paint, it would be unwise to attempt to apply anything to the surface.

I'd like to redecorate an old floor lamp. It has a good base, but the gold stand needs finishing. I'd like to do it in silver to match a new lamp. B. S.

You can apply a silver paint or aluminum paint to the base. Before applying either paint, go over the entire surface of the base with steel wool or emory paper to remove loose particles or rust. When the surface is smooth, wipe with a cloth moistened with turpentine to remove dust particles and any oil which may be on the surface.

Child Will Do For Itself if Encouraged

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

It is a proud baby who can grasp his own cup of milk, lift it to his lips and drink from it. It is a smart mother who will allow him that privilege, even if she must stand close by to avoid accidents and a deluge.

There comes a time, perhaps as early as 2 to 2½ years of age, when the baby is eager to help with his own dressing or undressing. He yanks at his shoes and hose and tries to rip his shirt over his head.

It's more tiresome, undoubtedly, to allow the child to dawdle over these tasks than to do them for him. But it is far better for the child, if he has the opportunity to practice to make himself progressively more independent of the parent. If he hasn't he'll lose the urge to help himself and at 5 years his mother will be bewailing his refusal to try to dress himself.

And so it goes in all other avenues of the child's life. He wants to be independent and he'll build up his capacities and capabilities only if he is allowed to do what he wants to do. This doesn't mean that a parent should never be quick to give help when it is asked, but by and large, a mother does better to let the child do anything he is capable of doing.

It is more than just the simple task of feeding and dressing himself and going to the toilet alone that is involved in this struggle toward independence. It is allowing the child to manage his own social conflicts, when he is clearly able to do so.

One on the Aisle—

Ex-Army Hoods Aided Circus Exit

By Richard L. Coe

GET-AWAY NIGHT at the Circus is always a spectacle. Saturday night's break-up at our Bennings was the big show's first from under the canvas this season—both the Boston and New York runs were played in buildings.

And you don't have to be told about Saturday night's downpour. It began just as the finale ended, in fact just when those 40-foot portraits of President Truman were unfurled by 60—count 'em 60—girls.

It was a rugged torrent that faced 10,000 spectators leaving the big top. During the performance the large tent of the freak show had been whisked away and had hit the road for Philadelphia. Naturally, no one wanted to leave the big tent, but the circus folk had a schedule to face.

One indirect hero turned out to be the Army, from whose "assets," as the phrase has it, some smart boys had bought up anti-gas protective sacks, whose plastic tops made it possible for you to peer at puddles and a nonstop cloudburst.

There was a rush for them when some men started selling these unique rain-protectors at one corner of the tent. They sold for one buck each and someone later told me he'd heard of a guy who'd bought 5000 of them for about 7 bucks. It was a neat profit, but you had to be in the right place at the right time with them to make it pay off. I had visions of turning my own into a covering for garden furniture, but in a few hours it had pretty much fallen apart. Obviously the things wouldn't have been worth anything to the Army, but it was a buck well spent so far as a suit, my good one, was concerned.

Roustabouts' Manners Excel

Getting the big tent down in the torrent was made a lot easier by this year's most widely-noted addition—the new type seats which fold into the same wagons that keep them in place during the show. Slapped forward, covered with canvas and then folded, some four aisles together, into trucks, those seats this summer will be a lot easier than those of the past for the circus folk to pack. Upholstered in red plastic, they're also easier for the customer's sitzplatz.

Watching the crowd advance reluctantly into the rain was another amusing sight. The circus people would have delighted the arbiters of social behavior. "I beg your pardon, please," they'd keep saying to their departing guests, "If you'll excuse me," the while hauling bundles, rolling rope and taking down lights. The good old Washington police force was less genteel. "Blankety, blank, G—D—, get going," the bluecoats roared.

Men From Mars

Behind the flap, finale costumes hit the trunks as soon as their wearers moved outside. In 20 minutes, despite the downpour, the backstage street—dressing tents, et al.—had disappeared and were chugging north to Philly.

There have been a lot of yarns in the past about how Army transportation men travel with Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey every year to see how efficiently the show moves.

But Saturday was a night, however by accident, the Army's old gas protectors did the circus a turn by helping to empty the big top. If it hadn't been for these weird green hoods with the see-through-able tops, which made us all look like men from Mars, I'd be folded right now in a sheet of canvas, Philadelphia-bound.

DOROTHY'S BACK: Dorothy McGuire's natural charm has been conspicuously lacking on both stage and screen lately while the young star has become a mother. Now the National is reviving one of her outstanding hits, "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn," from Betty Smith's widely-loved novel

Little Theater Group To Give 3-Act Comedy

Alexandria's Little Theater group will present the three-act comedy, "The Late George Apley," Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights at 8:30 in the Alexandria Recreation Center. The title role will be taken by Fred Todd, a veteran member of the community group. His wife will portray Mrs. Apley.

Show Time

Warner—"We Were Strangers," Jennifer Jones and John Garfield in a story about Cuban revolt, directed by John Huston, at 11:20 a. m., 1:30, 3:25, 5:30, 7:35 and 9:45 p. m.

Capitol—"The Barkleys of Broadway," Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire together again in a bright, sparkling musical, at 10:30 a. m., 1:25, 4:15, 7 and 10 p. m. Stage shows at 12:35, 3:30, 6:10 and 9:10 p. m.

Palace—"Belvedere Goes to College," Clifton Webb resumes that suave role he introduced in "Sitting Pretty," at 11:45 a. m., 1:45, 3:45, 5:45, 7:45 and 9:45 p. m.

RKO Keith's—"The Judge Steps Out," Alexander Knox, as a married Boston judge, discovers Ann Sothern in California, at 11:15 a. m., 1:20, 3:25, 5:30, 7:35 and 9:40 p. m.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—An eminent jurist is under consideration for the presidency of Yale University . . . Ex-Postmaster General Robert Hannegan will spend much of his time in New York, as a director of Twentieth Century-Fox and a theater-management corporation . . . Douglas Dick, who plays the young major in "Home of the Brave," was turned down for this same role in the Broadway play three years ago . . . Cornelia Otis Skinner will do her monologues in Europe this summer . . . In discussing radio to a group of educators, FCC Commissioner Frieda B. Hennock said: "Radio without educators is like medicine without doctors or law without lawyers."

Last week Will Clayton, Leo Cherne and Vincent Sheean appeared on the DuMont program, "Court of Public Opinion," on the question of "Should We Rearm Europe?" Before the program began, a DuMount official explained its operation to the guests . . . "When the verdict is rendered," asked Clayton, "is there any appeal from it?" . . . "Only," Cherne suggested, "to NBC."

Before Zerina went to the hospital this week, where her second son was born, she expressed deep interest in the suit brought by Tallulah Bankhead over the use of the name "Tallulah" as a dentrifrice. The dancer was hopeful that Tallulah would have better luck than she herself had had over the use of the name "Zorina" . . . A few years ago she had given a license to several manufacturers to name their products after her. And when she saw "Zorina Skunk" advertised by a N. Y. furrier, she immediately prepared to sue—until she learned "Zorina Skunk" was a brand name for over 100 years.

A movie producer recently bought some rare paintings, and showed them to his friends. One was an art expert, and the producer asked him: "What do you think?" . . . "I've seen your movies and I've seen your paintings," he said. "You would do better to hang your movies and release your paintings."

A leading department store in a city outside New York was given a 30-day franchise for the exclusive sale of the new Polaroid camera. Before the first day, its rival store sent employes to other cities where the camera was on sale and bought enough to advertise that it, too, had the camera in stock . . . The first store then sent its employes to the rival store, to buy up all the cameras in stock. And so it's been going, the same cameras being bought and sold at retail, with only the tax department profiting.

Miss Tolson In Brilliant Performance

By Richard Keith

Margaret Tolson, pianist, gave the fourth in the series of American music concerts at the National Gallery last night.

The sizable audience, which gathered in spite of the rain, was rewarded with one of the finest exhibitions of piano playing of the season. Miss Tolson has a thorough and confident understanding of her instrument, the technique of playing it, and the methods of interpreting modern music clearly. To learn and play the notes of such a quantity of difficult and unconventional music is a feat in itself; to play the music throughout with such absolute understanding and confidence is little short of a wonder.

As is usual with concerts of new music, the level of musical value had its ups and downs. It can be said without fear of appearing reactionary, that the Charles Griffes Sonata was the pithiest work of the evening. Although its style is somewhat dated, its ideas are strong and expertly developed. Miss Tolson must have recognized this, for her playing here was the most brilliant of the evening.

Virgil Thomson's Three Two-Part Inventions and his fourth Sonata, all of which received their first Washington performances, are typical examples of the unique Thomson idiom. Harmonically conservative, rhythmically square-cut, and often dangerously near to banality, they nevertheless have a neat freshness which keeps the listener alert and interested.

Three of the commonest weaknesses of musical writing—that of taking too long to say a simple thing, of wandering aimlessly in slow sections, and of coasting uncontrolled downhill in fast sections—were all well demonstrated last night. The slow movement and the finale of the Finney Sonata No. 3 suffered from the second and third. The Alleluia by Louise Talma, although a brilliant study in complicated rhythms, was much too long for its musical ideas.

Ray Green's "Festival Fugues," which are largely just very intellectual racket, and Anthony Donato's "African Dominoes," an inane and pretty feeble attempt to describe the moods of a crap game, were the least successful items of the evening.

One does not expect uniform high quality in a recital of this kind. In general, last night's concert was far above the average.

7 Safety Rules Given Drivers By Traffic Board

Traffic signs and signals are "Signs of Life," the District Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Board warned yesterday, urging motorists to obey them.

For safer, more efficient driving the board advises:

1. Learn the shapes of the five basic highway signs. Round markers mean approaching railroad crossings; Oblong signs show speed limits and other regulations; Diamond shaped signs warn of danger ahead; Octagonal signs always mean STOP; Crossbucks mark highway-rail crossings.

2. Don't get careless on familiar streets.

3. Control your speed so you can observe traffic signs.

4. Stay in your lane and obey "no passing" zones.

5. Remember STOP signs mean the other fellow has the right of way.

6. Slow down for round and diamond shaped signs.

7. Don't cross railroad tracks when lights, bells, or other warning signals are working. A slow freight may screen a flyer.

600 Negroes Face Teacher Test Cheating Charge

Columbia, S. C., May 22 (AP).—As many as 600 South Carolina Negro school teachers may be involved in cheating on certification examinations last February, the State Board of Education said last night.

The board began hearings to track down the source of distribution of answer sheets found to have been used in the examinations.

Ten cases were heard in yesterday's all-day meeting of the board. The defendants were called to show cause why their teaching certificates should not be revoked.

The board said an estimated 25 per cent of the 2400 who took the February examinations for certification or recertification had used the answer sheets, or "keys." Some were charged with both using and selling the keys.

FOR BEST SERVICE PLACE YOUR ADS EARLY

The steadily growing volume of classified ads in The Post, combined with the practice of many advertisers who phone late in the day, is making it difficult to devote the time and assistance to these late callers which is needed to prepare the most effective possible copy.

To assure receiving this help from your ad-taker, please try to call during the morning or early afternoon.

Special Treat

If I had lots of money I . . . Would like to give a treat . . .
To all the little boys and girls . . . I see along the street . . .
Especially the eager tots . . . Who look so hungry for . . . The candies and the cookies in . . . The window of a store . . . With noses pressed against the panes . . . And little lips apart . . .
They stir up all the feeling in . . . My sympathetic heart . . . I want to hustle them inside . . . And let them take their pick . . .
And satisfy their appetites . . . Without becoming sick . . . I only wish I had the cash . . . To give a special treat . . . To every little boy and girl . . . I see along the street.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Some Days It Doesn't Pay to Get Up

Somebody is always taking the joy out of life.

For example, look what happened when the Leon Typewriter Company asked me to serve as judge of their letter-writing contest.

"Nothing to buy—no boxtops," they explained. "The kids write a letter to a relative, telling them why they think a portable typewriter makes an excellent graduation gift. The relative enters the letter; you pick the best letter from an elementary school student and the best from a high school (junior or senior) student, and we give each of the winners a gold-plated portable. See how easy it is?"

"Yeah," I mused as I thought of a 13-year-old relative of mine who attends junior high school. "It certainly sounds easy, doesn't it? Hmmmm. And I pick the winner, eh?"

"Yep," came the answer, "and just to keep you honest, you'll have two fellow judges: Congressman George P. Miller of California, and the world's champion typist on a portable, Cortez Peters."

As I was saying—somebody is always taking the joy out of life.

LET'S EXORCISE THOSE TYPOS, MR. PRINTER

This newspaper's recent item about spooky goings on in the English hamlet of Hooe resulted in a ghastly ghostly error.

Moody Hull of 10103 Pierce dr., Silver Spring, Md.; Lindy Brock, John Whooley of Glenn Dale, Md., and H. S. Hamlin, jr., of 1103 Seaton lane, Falls Church, Va., team up to point an accusing finger at the woolgathering printer who gave us:

"The village parson was recently called to exercise the ghost of a Spanish smuggler."

THOUGHT FOR TODAY

"It might at that—except that most of us can't afford to establish those relationships at present."

"FULSOME" PRAISE?

One of the most misused words in the language must surely be "fulsome," which is frequently employed in the place of "full," "generous," "lavish," or "ample."

Roshan W. Dyar of Glenn Dale, Md., observes that Drew Pearson recently wrote:

"It was the Vice President who paid Margaret (Truman) the most fulsome praise."

If those who use "fulsome" in this manner will consult Mr. Webster, they'll find that he says the word means: "Offensive, disgusting; offensively excessive, insincere."

COINCIDENCE DEPT.

"My husband delights in calling my attention to the antics of Myrtle, in the comic strip next door," writes Myrtle Mero of Chamberlain Village, Quantico, Va.

"He thought it was pretty funny to kid me, just because my name was the same as that of the little girl in the comics.

"But the tables are turned now, because the artist has provided Myrtle with a very proper little boy friend named Walton. And Walton is my husband's name.

"I wonder if Cartoonist Dudley Fisher knows that Myrtle and Walton are a real-life couple?"

If he didn't know it, Myrtle, he's gonna. I'll send him a clipping of this item and I'll bet he acknowledges it by sending you a special sketch of Myrtle.

LAST BUT NOT LEAST

I've been invited to bring a tape recorder to the next meeting of the District Liners Club (Petworth Library, Georgia ave. and Upshur st. nw., Wednesday at 8 p. m.).

I'm supposed to interview the District Liners and use the recording on my radio program the next morning.

But I think I'll fool them, and save it for Friday's final broadcast of "This Is Washington." I can't think of a better way to conclude the series than by working with the District Liners whose support made it possible.

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. W. A. Morris, 909 Heron dr., Silver Spring, Md.: Aw, shucks, ma'm, 'twarn't nothin'.

E. L. DeLoach, 520 Southern Railway Building: Thanks — they've been taken care of.

C. Warren Loveless, 4416 Harrison st. nw.: You can tell Clayton E. Evans of 4030 N. Washington blvd., Arlington, Va., that it's just a question of space. "Those Wondrous Nats" appears whenever Herb can shoehorn it in.

Henrietta Sears Childs, Freedmen's Hospital: I hope you're feeling better now. Keep your chin up.

"Constant Reader": May I recommend my technique for such problems? You'll find it very simple and effective. Whenever I am dissatisfied with a place of public amusement, I stop patronizing it.

Frances Morriss, Nebraska Hall, Arlington Farms, Va.: You win. I didn't think a woman was going to let me have the last word.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

U. S. Hopes Reds May Play Ball

By Drew Pearson

Here is a summary of the general instructions in Secretary of State Acheson's pocket for the most important peace parley since Potsdam. It opens in Paris today.

Acheson

1. The United States will take the position that we owe the Russians nothing for lifting the Berlin blockade, since this was merely righting a wrong.

2. The State Department is leaning more and more to the view that Russia really wants to play ball with the Western democracies; we will do our best to cooperate at Paris.

3. The U. S. A. will propose that Russia's eastern Germany be amalgamated with the Allies' western Germany in one democratic republic. An election would be jointly supervised by the four powers. The recent overwhelming protest vote in the Russian zone makes it apparent that in any free election, anti-Communists would win.

4. An Allied control council would be established inside Germany to inspect possible armament factories.

Troops Out of Germany

This brings Acheson's instructions down to the most important question of all—whether Allied troops are to be withdrawn from the country which, in 20 brief years, fomented two terrible wars. The answer to this is not so easy.

Nevertheless it is certain that Foreign Minister Vishinsky will propose that the troops of all countries be withdrawn from Germany and go home altogether. This would mean Russian troops could withdraw within the Polish border—then march back into Germany want no trouble, whenever they wanted to. It would also mean that American troops would pull back across the Atlantic and could not return to Germany within weeks, probably months—all depending on congressional debate.

To answer this question the State Department sent to Germany George Kennan, head of its strategy board.

Kennan came back with the counterproposal that United States and British troops return to the embarkation cities of Hamburg and Bremen, with French troops returning to the French border.

The Kennan plan was then reviewed by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who frowned on any evacuation to Hamburg and Bremen. There was room in these two cities, they said, for approximately 300,000 United States and British troops. Instead, they proposed:

1. That all Allied troops be withdrawn from the main German centers.

2. That Allied troops then be stationed on both banks of the Rhine, some in German territory, some in French.

3. That a German constabulary force be carefully trained by Allied instructors to maintain order in the evacuated parts of Germany.

The above Joint Chiefs of Staff program has now been adopted as official United States policy, and is what Secretary Acheson will propose at Paris—if the Russians demand complete evacuation of Germany.

France Objects

Next problem Acheson faces is the position of our French and British allies. The latter are willing to accept the above Chiefs of Staff program, but the French are not. French Ambassador Bonnet has made this repeatedly clear to the State Department on instructions from his government.

France, he said, was determined to keep troops in Germany regardless of what England and the United States might do and would not even accept the plan to withdraw to German port cities.

Acheson's assistant, Charles (Chip) Bohlen, is now in Paris trying to persuade Foreign Minister Schuman to reverse this stand. It is interesting to note that Bohlen, a cousin of the famous German munitions makers, Krupp von Bohlen, does not favor keeping an Allied Control Council inside Germany to inspect industrial plants. Other State Department officials do not agree with him.

Those are some of the A-B-C points of a conference which holds the peace of the world in its hand and can, if successful, set a new tide in the affairs of men.

Senate Recess

The Democratic high command has decided not to recess the Senate until it has voted on the Atlantic pact, Taft-Hartley law and reciprocal trade agreements—plus whatever else can be sandwiched in. The leaders estimate this will take until July 31.

The talk is that President Truman will barnstorm the country again this summer to get a first-hand look at the state of the Union—and regain some of his lost strength. Then he will probably call a special session in October.

Elevator Priority

Senators are priority passengers on Capitol Hill elevators. It is an unwritten rule that Senators have the special privilege of buzzing three times. This is supposed to be a summons to the elevator operator to halt in his tracks and scoot full-throttle to pick up the senatorial caller. Ofttimes a common citizen gets stuck in an elevator shuttling Senators, and doesn't reach his floor for five minutes.

Only one Senator scorns this special privilege and buzzes once. He is Kentucky's homespun Senator Garrett Withers, who figures he is no better than anyone else. In fact, he scolds elevator boys who try to take him to his destination ahead of his turn.

Another has-been is back on Capitol Hill, haunting the Senators' private rooms and lobbying against increased whisky taxes. He is Edward McGinnis, who used to be Senate sergeant at arms under the Republicans. After several weeks of buttonholing Senators in the back rooms, McGinnis finally got around to registering as a lobbyist for the Distilled Spirits Institute. Salary: $12,000, plus expenses.

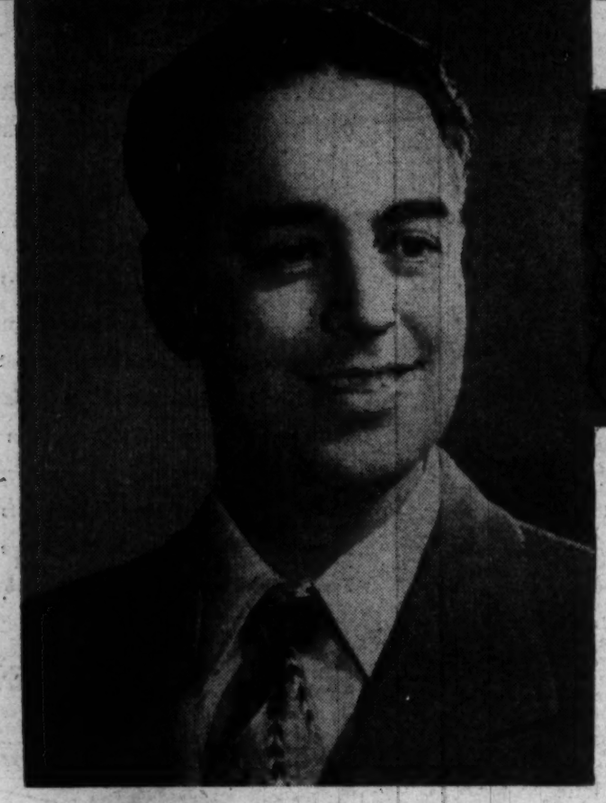
Number 16 in a Series... Hecht Co. Personalities in the News



NELSON P. GRELLER, our Service Buildings and Transportation Manager, is the engineer who conceived and designed our mechanization. He spent 31 months as an officer in the U. S. Army . . . started with The Hecht Co. in 1945 as a consultant engineer . . . became so engrossed in our mechanization program . . . he decided to make engineering in retailing a lifetime career. He's married, has a son and a daughter . . . lives in a completely unmechanized Chevy Chase home. Likes to play golf, but claims he's a first class duffer.

It's Like Perpetual Motion...

SAYS NELSON P. GRELLER, SERVICE BUILDINGS AND TRANSPORTATION MANAGER

"It's like perpetual motion," says Nelson Greller, ". . . a continuous flow of merchandise from receiving platform . . . through the marking rooms . . . to the selling counters. $150,000 worth of equipment to see to it that a bottle of perfume . . . a sport shirt . . . gets to you, the buying public, the same day it is received at our Service Building. Of course, getting one shirt or one bottle of perfume marked and ready for sale is quite simple . . . but The Hecht Co. receives an average of 250,000 pieces of merchandise a week . . . over 12,000,000 units a year at the G Street Building alone. In most stores throughout the Country, processing these goods is a hand operation. The Hecht Co. does it the modern way, using almost a mile of conveyor belts and gravity rollers . . . using a system of mechanization developed over a period of years by our own engineer and today managed and supervised by Mr. Jack Serber, our G Street Building Manager, and Mr. Alan Friedman, Chief of Receiving and Marking.

The picture you see above is the fruit of the first experiment of its kind in department store history. Yes, The Hecht Co. pioneered the country in the use of this type of conveyor belt system. In July of 1948, the first shipment of merchandise flowed automatically through two floors of our G Street Service Building with a minimum of handling . . . with a minimum of physical exertion on the part of our associates. Twenty-four hours later that same merchandise was being sold in our Washington and Silver Spring stores. Mechanization cut down processing time by five days! Mechanization helps bring you the things you want and need quickly . . . when you need them most. The success we have had with mechanization is more than a testimonial to the efficiency of machinery. It is an example of people who believe that when an idea has merit, they are willing to go beyond the limits of ordinary effort and teamwork to make it live. These are the things that make The Hecht Co. a great place to work . . . a great place to shop."
